Flood Project Appraisal to Start at Once

Steps leading toward construction of the Orange county flood control project were being taken today.

Appraisers to evaluate land for rights of way will be appointed by the Federal Land bank at Berkeley and the work of estimating land values will commence almost immediately.

Supervisor W. C. Jerome of Santa Ana made this announcement today following a conference with land bank officials at Berkeley, attended by Supervisor Willard Smith of Orange and C. A. Palmer, manager of the Orange County National Farm Loan association.

Appointment of appraisers by the land bank will be in keeping with the fact that the federal government and army engineers will build the Orange county dams, Jerome said. The board thus will take no part in selection of the appraisers.

County's Part of Job
Orange county's part in the huge job will be to buy the rights of way after they are appraised, at a cost estimated from $1,500,000 to $2,500,000. The latter figure represents the 1929 valuation, while the lower one is that suggested by Supervisor N. E. West of Laguna Beach.

Jerome said the land bank officials agreed to supply three appraisers to be selected by bank officials. They will be civil service men, certified by the federal government, said Jerome.

To Take 90 Days
Their fee will be $15 a day and expenses. It is expected the job will require about 90 days. The program includes a dam on the Santa Ana river at Prado and on seven smaller streams in the county.

The federal government has approved the omnibus bill which includes the Orange county project to the tune of $13,000,000. Federal money is available for the project. A bond issue will be required in order that the county may pay for rights of way.

Divorce Attacked
Johnson's wife declared that his marriage to Mrs. Johnson was not legal because, he contended, her previous Mexican divorce from Leon Engstrom was void, and he denied paternity of her daughter, Beverly. He left the daughter $5,400 but cut off Mrs. Johnson, saying he had given her a $25,000 home in Beverly Hills. The remainder of the estate was bequeathed to other relatives.

STORM HITS TEXAS
HOUSTON, Texas. (AP)—A tropical storm of hurricane proportions raged over Aransas Pass today, piling combers high on the beach.

Dionne Crawls Through Drain to See His Quins
CALLANDER, Ont. (AP)—Olivia Dionne crawled through a drainpipe today to see his famous daughters, the quintuplets. He had been barred from the Dafoe hospital, where the 25-month-old girls are quartered, because his home is under quarantine for measles suffered by the older children.

Did You See?
EARL ABBEY wondering whether a cigar would gain or lose a vote?
LOYD BANKS looking relieved as he turned in his budget estimates?
COATS being shed as the Republication rally and jollification warmed up last night?
TED CRAIG referring to Lieutenant-Governor Ray Hatfield as "a speaker who is fundamentally sound?"

The three policemen on duty at the hospital behind a high wire fence were amazed when the quintuplets' father suddenly appeared in the yard. They permitted him to look through a window at the little girls. Dionne went away as he had come—through a drainpipe under the fence. The policemen plugged up the pipe after he had gone.

LOCAL ACE SETS AIR PACE Model Ship Earns Boston Trip

Competing against 70 amateur birdmen throughout Southern California, Tom Engleman, Santa Ana High school sophomore, yesterday won first prize in the Southern California division for flying ship models, and a trip to Boston in August.

In Boston the Santa Ana boy will enter the national contest finals. His home-manufactured plane model yesterday stayed in the air 13 minutes and 28 seconds, to capture the first place.

'PAYOFFS' IN RUM TRADE DESCRIBED

'Foghorn Murphy' Tells Quizzers of Deals Offered to Him

LOS ANGELES. (AP)—A witness who boasted he "got in some people's hair" drew the applause of spectators today at the assembly liquor hearing when he testified he refused to make what he described as "payoffs."

The witness, J. A. Murphy, wholesale liquor dealer, is known as "Foghorn" because of his custom of riding on horseback through the streets each year to shout the announcement of the opening of the Pacific Coast league baseball season.

"Could Have Seen Europe"
"Why, if I'd been in that business, with all the payoffs I stopped, I could have seen Europe," he boomed out in telling of asserted demands for money in order to obtain liquor licenses.

"I got in some people's hair, and I stuck there," he added.

Asked who these people were he named the late Elwood Squires, assistant secretary of the state board of equalization; Ray Edgar, member of the board; Mrs. Helen M. Werner, so-called czarina of Los Angeles politics, and Merle Templeton, chief Los Angeles liquor enforcement officer.

There's That List
Murphy declared that Harold Reiss, proprietor of a cafe whose license had been revoked, told him he was in difficulty because his name was "not on the list."

"What list?" The well-known list of Werner, Squires, and Parsons?" Murphy said he asked Reiss.

"He told me that was the list."

Murphy said he went with Reiss to see Murray Parsons, then acting head of the liquor control office here, and Parsons said to Reiss: "Don't worry, we will reconsider your case and you will get your license back."

Murphy testified Reiss told him that previous to this visit a man whose name was not given had demanded $1000 of Reiss, and Reiss posted a check for that amount with his bank with orders it was not to be cashed until he obtained his license.

Then, Murphy declared Reiss informed him, the demand was raised to $2000, and "I told Reiss not to pay anyone a damned cent."

"Paid $200 to Fixers"
Murphy said he also talked over liquor matters with Max Silverman, a cafe owner who testified yesterday he had been solicited for money to get his license renewed.

"Silverman told me that a man said to him he was going to lose his license, but that it could be fixed for $50. Silverman also said that he had got a notice to appear in that kangaroo court. I told him he didn't have a chance because 99 out of every 100 who appeared there lost their licenses," said Murphy.

Murphy was not asked to explain "kangaroo court."

Silverman later told him, said Murphy, that his license had been renewed after paying attorney fees and $200 to people in Sacramento.

ACCIDENT KILLS ELMER POST

Elmer A. Post, 23, Bolsa, was instantly killed in a traffic accident on the ridge route late yesterday. His wife of two months suffered a serious leg fracture in the same accident. Post was driving a truck loaded with a tractor, which crashed down a grade, out of control, according to reports received here. An inquest was to be held today at Bakersfield.

The couple were on their way to a pipe line job at Paso Robles, when the tragedy occurred, at about 5 p. m. Mrs. Post was taken to the San Joaquin hospital at Bakersfield. She was formerly Vivian Wagner, Olive. Her mother, Mrs. Wagner, left last night for the north.

Post was the youngest of three brothers who operate the Post brothers tractor rental service, Bolsa. At the time of the accident, Norman Post was already on the job near Paso Robles. Charles Post left Bolsa at once for Bakersfield. Post is survived also by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Post, residents of a ranch near Bolsa.

Shorts for Business? Swell Idea, Say Some; Not So Good, Say Others; So Skinny Tries 'Em

By ROCH BRADSHAW

The hairy ape! Unless Santa Ana men have figgers like Johnny Weissmuller, that's what the women will call them the first time they come down to their offices in new fangled shorts, exposing their bare legs. Ruth Jenkins and Gloria Kirchner found that out when they interviewed Santa Anans for The Journal today.

And the gals who have "something in the way of curves to brag about"—they'll be the first of their sex to startle the boss—the hairy ape—by taking dictation in abbreviated attire.

Impossible? They're doing it already in New York. It'll be a little hard to get used to at first, like it was when men first began wearing trunks at the beach. But the time may come when there will be one of these "Tarzans" in every office, and a lass in cool "scanties" on the other side of every desk.

The Journal wanted to get the lowdown on how Santa Ana folks will respond to shorts as every day attire. The best way was to ask them—and show them a picture of what the well-dressed business man and his secretary will wear when it gets hot.

Vanderma's clothing store provided the shorts worn in the picture accompanying this article. It took the combined strength of the entire Journal news force to get Skinny Skirvin into the little pants. But after he got posed for the picture and started dictating his Journal column to Gloria Kirchner, as his secretary, he didn't want to take them off.

In fact, Skinny wanted to stay right there and dictate columns for a month in advance.

There they are, folks, what do you think about them?

"A heck of a lot of us have nothing to brag about, or we might wear shorts, too, in this hot weather."

That was Prudence Drews of the county welfare office, replying to the above question.

"I'd like lounging PJs," she admitted. "Cool and comfortable. Shorts? Well... they wouldn't do much for me!"

Allison Honer, commander of the Santa Ana post of the American Legion, cut in and said he couldn't imagine himself calling on his banker, or his doctor, in shorts.

Coroner Early Abbey accepted the idea with a big hooray—not for himself, however. And he, like some others, refused to pose for a picture in shorts. But let him relax in his chair and murmur pleasantly: "The way I feel today, it's a great idea. All the girls ought to. It would increase business. Additional help would be hired. In fact, it's a good plank for any platform."

"Everyone would get along better. As it is now, all the girls are so hot they wish they were at the beach. This measure would put it out of their heads. Absolutely, it should be put in effect everywhere."

Here's a reply from the office of Dr. George Warner, pastor of the First Methodist church—expressed by his daughter, Florence, over the phone: "Shorts to the office? Dad would have ten million cat fits!"

Dr. Warner shortly afterward confirmed the report.

"I'd tell them," he said, trying to be calm, "to get out of my office!" At least one man in Santa Ana (Please Turn to Page 2, Col. 1)

If shorts in business hours were the vogue! Here we have C. F. (Skinny) Skirvin, columnist for The Journal, as he might appear during these hot summer days, dictating a particularly juicy piece of scandal for his daily "Scribbles" to a cool-looking young secretary, impersonated (shorts and all) by Miss Gloria Kirchner. "Why not?" exclaims Skinny. "At least I'm old enough to keep my mind on my business."

FEAR TROUBLE IN SHANGHAI

U. S. Orders All Sailors to Return to Ships at Tsingtao

SHANGHAI. (AP)—United States naval authorities ordered American sailors on shore leave at Tsingtao today to return to their ships. The order, issued to avoid possible international complications, followed a Japanese demonstration.

One thousand Japanese residents of Tsingtao, Shantung province, were reported to have attempted to storm the residence of General Andrew Campbell, British customs commissioner.

The attempt was frustrated by police from the Japanese consulate, the Domei (Japanese) News agency said.

The crowd gathered in front of the Chinese customs house, the agency said.

Japanese soldiers were placed before the commissioner's residence.

Farley Retains Seat in Saddle

PHILADELPHIA. (AP)—The new Democratic national committee elected Postmaster General James A. Farley today as national chairman.

Beyond saying they were "very happy," neither one would talk. Hodge is a factory worker here. His parents signed a consent for the marriage.

California Votes Solid for Garner

PHILADELPHIA. (AP)—California voted solidly today for renomination of Vice President Garner.

There was no caucus. The delegates decided individually to support the vice president and there was no dissent. Garner was the 1932 choice in California for President. At the convention that year, however, the delegates finally switched to Mr. Roosevelt, insuring his nomination.

Three speakers voiced the delegates' unanimous choice of President Roosevelt for renomination. They were Senator McAdoo, former treasury secretary, Mrs. Lucretia Del Valle Grady, new national committeewoman, and Miss Dorothy Powers of San Francisco, leader of Young Women Democrats.

Senator McAdoo became temporary presiding officer of the convention for introducing Mrs. Grady and Miss Powers.

Both he and Mrs. Grady told of a change of California registration from a 500,000 Republican majority in 1932 to 500,000 Democratic majority this year. (Please Turn to Page 2, Col. 2)

U. S. TANKER IN DISTRESS

MANILA. (Sunday) (AP)—Three Japanese ships were attempting to rescue the crew of the American tanker Magnolia ashore on Mappi island, Korea, said Reuters News Agency dispatches received here today. A heavy windstorm was hampering the rescuers.

The Magnolia, owned by the General Petroleum Corporation, previously was reported leaking badly in her forward tanks. She is commanded by Captain William Wood and has a crew of 34.

The vessel ran ashore Saturday. She left San Pedro, Cal., June 6 with 130,000 barrels of gasoline for Dairen, Manchoukuo.

The Japanese steamer Awaji Maru first responded to the Magnolia's radio call for help Saturday.

F. D. R. IS SET FOR SPEECH

Will Accept Nomination Tonight in Open Air Philadelphia Rites

WASHINGTON. (AP)—Putting the finishing touches on the renomination acceptance speech he will deliver at Philadelphia tonight, President Roosevelt gave some time also today to a conference on the Middle-western drought.

He called in Secretary Wallace and Chester Davis, the former AAA administrator who now is a member of the federal reserve board, to discuss the drought before his departure for the Quaker city late in the afternoon.

Aides said the President would be accompanied by Mrs. Roosevelt, Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi and a large group of the White House staff.

Determined to have the acceptance speech start on schedule at 9 p. m. (EST), aides arranged for the President to get directly from his train to Franklin field.

Commenting on reports that Santa Barbara, Calif., was under discussion as the location of a "Summer White House," members of the executive staff said the President's plans for the summer still were indefinite. It was added that a California vacation trip was not scheduled at present.

Aimee Faints at End of Sermon

LOS ANGELES. (AP)—Aimee Semple McPherson, noted evangelist, fainted after preaching last night and was ordered by her physicians to remain in bed today because of a severe cold that threatened to develop into pneumonia.

The collapse of Mrs. McPherson came as a climax to a busy day at Angelus Temple during which her associate pastor, Rhoda Crawford, the "Angel of Broadway," was ordered to desist from using her pulpit title in her political radio broadcasts. Both Mrs. McPherson and Miss Crawford denied rumors of a rift in their relations.

DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION CONCLUDES

Climax of Philadelphia Session Is Speech of Acceptance Tonight

By EDWARD J. DUFFY
CONVENTION HALL, Philadelphia. (AP)—Twice unanimous, the Democratic convention renominated Roosevelt and Garner today for the already-accelerating presidential campaign.

Both the President and vice president will accept the campaign mandate before a mammoth audience at Franklin field this evening.

It will be the first time in American history that both candidate of a political party have been nominated and formally notified in a space of 24 hours.

It's All Over
A din of "ayes" from the crowded floor ratified Roosevelt for the leading place on the ticket at 12:42 a. m.

After a rest, a subdued and smaller assemblage of the delegates formally designated his running mate at 1:52 p. m., just before adjournment of the ninth and final session.

Chairman Joe T. Robinson banged sine die adjournment gavel with a smile of relief at 2:19 p. m.

Allred Nominator
Placed in nomination by Gov. James V. Allred of Texas, Garner was given his demonstration innings in a march led by his fellow south-westerners.

Their rebel-yells were loud and frequent; but the scene contrasted with yesterday's pandemonium for Roosevelt as many of the wearied delegates contented themselves with looking on.

In the 20-minute parade through the aisles, the six flags under which Texas has been governed in times past fluttered above the broad, white sombreros of their bearers.

Garner Listens In
The vice president himself listened-in at his hotel. He preferred to "take a walk," he had joked with friends, in disdainful suggestions that he visit the convention.

The popular old-timer smoked cigar after cigar while awaiting the President, who was expected shortly before the time scheduled for the notification climax, 10 p. m., daylight time (6 p. m. Santa Ana time).

Administration leaders looked for the President to follow much

A Week-end That's Really Big!

It's a big week-end in society! We mean The Journal's society department. Betty Cox, the interesting new society editor, has just persuaded the makeup man to let her run the Saturday society page on the cover page of section two. She has obtained pictures of a number of pretty and prominent young Orange county women. She has an unusual assortment of vacation news. And she's written her usual weekly "Chat a While With Betty." We know you'll like this special new Saturday feature. Look it over today—and watch for it next week.

COURT DENIES WHIPSTOCK DEFENSE

'Dirty Hands' Charge of Petrol in Standard Case Disallowed

The "dirty hands" defense of Petrol corporation to an injunction and damage action of Huntington Beach company and Standard Oil company over alleged "whipstock" drilling was ruled out of court yesterday by Superior Judge James L. Allen in department 3 of Orange county superior court.

Judge Allen sustained a plaintiff's demurrer to Petrol corporation's answer, ordering it amended in 10 days, and ordered stricken from the record an amendment which made the "dirty hands" charge.

Petrol corporation, in addition to denying its well had wandered into adjoining Standard Oil leases, had sought to block action on grounds Standard wells had drifted in the same field, and that therefore the plaintiffs came into court "with dirty hands" and should be barred from complaining.

Huntington Beach company and Standard Oil ask an injunction against further production from Petrol's Lambert No. 1 well and seek an accounting of oil produced.

LOOKS LIKE REED MAY 'TAKE A WALK'

KANSAS CITY, (AP)—Former U. S. Senator James A. Reed of Missouri, one of the four Democrats who joined Al Smith in a plea to Democrats to desert the leadership of Franklin D. Roosevelt, renewed the attack today with sharp criticism of the 1936 Democratic platform.

In a statement he predicted "the regimentation of agriculture" and "the reincarnation of the NRA" if the Democratic party wins.

MORE ABOUT SHORTS

Ana sees nothing wrong in shorts. "Men wear shorts at the beach, why not at the office?" demanded Paul Velez, author, and husband of the Rev. Julia Budlong, pastor of the Unitarian church. "The trend seems to be that way, anyway. Why try to stop it?"

Then there's the case of Sheriff Logan Jackson. He did not assent to shorts for office wear, but he had his reasons, Miss Jenkins reported.

"We Have to Work" "I think," said the sheriff, "that as sheriff I'd rather see girls in their regular dresses. This is a place where we work, you know." Jackson smiled, apparently at the thought of what might happen if he did not have to work.

REPORT DROP TELLS VIEWS IN SCHOOL ON MEXICAN EXODUS TOTALS

Elementary school attendance in Orange county dropped 78 units of average daily attendance this year under last year, according to a tabulation completed today in the office of Ray Adkinson, county superintendent of schools.

Attendance, including seventh and eighth grades in junior high schools, was 16,240, as compared with 16,318 the previous year. High school reports, although not completed, are expected to show attendance of 6200.

On the basis of attendance, Adkinson estimated the state of California will contribute $934,000 for elementary schools and $558,000 for high schools in Orange county for next year. The state pays approximately $60 per unit of attendance for elementary schools and $90 for high school attendance units.

Elementary attendance in larger cities of the county this year was Santa Ana, 3608; Anaheim, 1353; Fullerton, 1183; Orange, 823. The Santa Ana figure includes 2748 in elementary schools and 859 seventh and eighth grade students in junior high schools. There were also 503 units of attendance in ninth grades of the local junior high schools, according to the report.

Death Comes to William Gregg

William M. Gregg, resident of Santa Ana for the past 10 years and orange grower in this county for 40 years, died yesterday at his home 1812 North Ross street. He had been ill for several weeks.

Funeral services will be held at 11:30 a. m. Monday in the Winbigler mortuary chapel, followed by cremation at Fairhaven crematory.

Surviving relatives are his wife, Mrs. Irma Gregg; two sons, Terrence L. Gregg, Hemet, Robert N. Scove, Santa Ana; a daughter, Mrs. Marie G. Oelke, Laguna; a brother, Calvin J. Gregg, Anaheim and a sister, Mrs. Elmer Dean, Fullerton.

MORE ABOUT CALIF. VOTERS

TORTURE BY SNAKES IS DESCRIBED SIX ARRESTED IN PICKERS' STRIKE

LOS ANGELES, (AP)—The cross-examination of Charles Hope produced testimony which, as interpreted by prosecutors, indicated Robert S. James, green-eyed barber, sought a diabolical pleasure in submitting his seventh wife to rattlesnake torture.

Trial of James on charges he murdered his wife, Mary, by drowning her in a bathtub after thrusting her bare leg into a box of rattlesnakes, was in adjournment for the week-end.

Hope, ex-sailor who has pleaded guilty to first degree murder in connection with the woman's death, clung steadfastly through cross-questioning to his original story.

Helped Dump Body The story is that he purchased rattlesnakes James used in the grotesque death plot, that he saw Mrs. James exposed to their fangs, that he helped dump her body into a fishpond after the defendant drowned her.

Hope testified yesterday when questioned by Defense Attorney Russell Parsons that he had in his possession for some time before the death of Mrs. James last August 4 a vial containing crystals of rattlesnake venom.

He gave the vial to James, he said, but James professed disinterest in the deadly substance and ordered him to obtain some snakes.

"True Motive" "This disclosure sheds true light on James' motive and behavior in our opinion," declared Eugene Williams, deputy district attorney.

"We charge that in addition to seeking the $20,000 insurance on his wife's life, James sought to achieve a super sadistic satisfaction by means of the rattlesnake attack."

Hope testified he got the poison crystals from a Long Beach snake dealer to whom James sent him. "I took the bottle up to James and told him what was in it," he said. "He said he wasn't interested and for me to get him some good snake."

Hope testified that James jumped in terror of the snakes just before he thrust his wife's leg into the box containing them.

Wife Tells Story The witness bore up comparatively well under the cross-examination. He has twice collapsed on the stand in telling his tale of horror.

His wife, Florence, followed him on the stand. She testified that without knowledge of the significance of their mission, she accompanied her husband to a reptile dealer to get the snakes, and with the deadly cargo.

Mrs. Ethel Smith, niece of the defendant, testified that she and her husband and her parents-in-law drove to the James home on August 4 and could not get in. This was at the time, she charged, that Mrs. James lay trussed on a table awaiting torture by the fangs of the snakes.

Lost Marriage License Puts Cupid on Spot at Orange

By GLORIA KIRCHNER

Lost—A marriage license as good as new—and found again in the same state, but much more appreciated than it ever was before!

Pandemonium reigned in the J. W. Powell home, Orange. They had the bride-to-be, and the husband-to-be was forthcoming at instant notice, but where was the marriage license?

Miss Cora Alice Powell, prospective bride, rushed to the telephone and called the courthouse, to find out the chances of getting a duplicate license.

"No license, no marriage!" the unperturbed clerk told her. He said they would have to file their intention notice all over again.

What to do? Eighty guests were invited for the wedding on Sunday!

Miss Powell had discovered her loss upon reaching home from Santa Ana at noon yesterday, by stage. She immediately called the Motor Transit. The bus she had ridden on was back at Fullerton, and searched four times, with no results.

What matter the feelings or important business of the other passengers? The couple had to get married, didn't they?

A clew! She had been at a Santa Ana drug store, and chances were she had left the license there. With buoyant spirits, she rushed to the telephone and called the store.

Her buoyant spirits sank about six feet as she heard someone reply they had not found any marriage license, and knew nothing about it.

Then she thought of an old standby, the Orange police, and called a family friend, Police Chief Franzen. The chief got busy and sent out Officer Coltrane. They decided that the poor bridegroom, Oswald (Ozzie) Ulrich, ought to know about this, and got in touch with the Newport police, who in turn finally reached him on a yacht in the bay.

Visions of wrecked cars and disaster haunted the young man following the first sketchy, hysterical news which he was able to understand, but he finally pulled himself together enough to search his car, and reveal that the license was not there, either.

Just then, the drug store stepped in, pinch-hitting for Cupid, and found the license. Everyone seemed to take a different view of the case, and started to laugh about it, with the weary couple joining in. Romance and excitement galore, and have they got a swell story to tell their grandchildren someday!

FIVE PERSONS INJURED IN CRASHES

Five drivers were injured, many fenders bent, and one driver had been arrested today in a series of five accidents on Orange county roads. None of the injuries was serious, according to reports.

Clarence R. Johnson, 40, Inglewood, was given a citation by Officers B. A. Craig and T. L. Dunagan of the California Highway patrol last night when his car collided with a car driven by Victor Beach. The driver of the other car was John M. Senter, 43, Compton. No injuries were reported.

Two Hurt Two youths riding a motorcycle were slightly injured yesterday afternoon when their vehicle collided with a car driven by Victor DeSutter, 44, route 4. The injured persons in the other car, which Sutter's car near a private driveway leading into the Irvine ranch, were Myron Hugh Gerrard, 20, 2009 Victoria drive, Gerrard, and Harry Bolen, 22, 3081 North Sycamore street, a passenger.

Blind Intersection Ralph McBride, 22, Orange, and Elax Miller, 70, Pomona, were out and bruised last night as cars driven by McBride and Paul E. Boyle, 42, Pomona, collided near the Martin airport.

Ray Mayo, 48, Huntington Beach, was slightly injured yesterday in a collision west of Anaheim. Drivers of the cars involved were R. D. Dikes, 27, Fullerton, and Mat Ferrero, 39, Buena Park. The two cars collided on Magnolia avenue at a blind intersection.

Leaving the road east of Stanton, yesterday, Gilbert M. Foss, 19, Placentia, drove his car head-on into a telephone pole, but was uninjured.

"Now what do you suppose...?" wondered a reporter. "Say," said the governor, leaning from the car, "have any of you fellows found a good place to get a haircut?"

Landons Vote 'Simple Life' on Vacation in Colorado

ESTES PARK, Colo. (AP)—Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas and his family voted today for the "simple life."

The Republican presidential candidate, Mrs. Landon, the three children—Peggy Anne, 19, Nancy Jo, nearly 4, and John Cobb, 2½—and Mrs. S. E. Cobb, Mrs. Landon's mother, are vacationing here on a secluded ranch in Rocky Mountain National park.

The early mountain dawn is apt to find the governor trout fishing along the banks of Cow creek, which flows through the 120-acre property leased by the Landons for the summer.

Twinkle Brightens The first few days of relaxation have noticeably brightened the twinkle in his dark brown eyes and smoothed the lines his face acquired during the last few weeks' strain.

The small Landons, Nancy Jo and John Cobb, likewise are early risers, and that, Mrs. Landon explained, calls for early hours for the rest of the household.

Ranch life is new to these youngsters and they have found many things to see and do. There are elk and deer to watch as they come down to the stream in the morning. There's a white bunny—Nancy Jo's new pet—to feed.

There are some baby chicks—John's interest—to tend. There are numerous mountain trails, and the Landons have engaged saddle horses.

Wants a Haircut Each day brings a break in the governor's self-imposed exile. He comes into Estes park to hold press conferences. With good humor he responds to questions on the number and size of fish he has caught, but shies away from political questions with, "this is my vacation."

Bareheaded and in riding clothes, he was driven into the first press conference by Peggy Anne.

As the governor was driven away, it was noticed the car was circling back. "Now what do you suppose...?" wondered a reporter.

"Say," said the governor, leaning from the car, "have any of you fellows found a good place to get a haircut?"

CHILDREN TO FILL PLAY AREAS

Summer Recreation and Camping Projects Begin Monday

The good old summertime will break forth officially for Orange county children Monday.

Recreation centers in 22 communities, including nine playgrounds in Santa Ana, will open full blast Monday, with everything from baseball to basket weaving offered.

Sixty county youngsters, members of 4-H clubs, will form the vanguard of several hundred summer campers tomorrow, when they travel to Camp Rokili for a week's outing. The camp has been turned over to the 4-H organization by the county Boy Scout council prior to opening of the regular Scout camp July 6.

Swimmers with a desire to get out of the heat will flock to the high school pool Monday, open for the first time to the public in conjunction with the WPA summer recreation project, which also will operate the 22-community playground activity.

County playgrounds will employ 306 workers for their projects, following a week's course in leadership. Wood carving, pottery, basketry, and other handicrafts will be offered, as well as games, athletics, dramatics, and music. Harmonica bands will be organized at many playgrounds, particularly in the eastern portion of the county.

Persons especially skilled in story telling, clay modeling, harp music playing and wood carving will be placed on a schedule which allows them to instruct at all playgrounds here.

Hours in Santa Ana will be from 9:30 a. m. to noon and from 1:30 to 4:30 p. m. Hours in Orange will be from 1 to 6 p. m. and in Anaheim from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m.

Playgrounds here will be conducted at the municipal bowl, Willard and Lathrop Junior High schools, Fremont, Delhi, and Logan schools, and Lowell, Franklin, and Lincoln elementary schools.

In addition to Boy Scout campers at Camp Rokili, several hundred underprivileged youngsters from Santa Ana will be given week outings by "good fellows" who donate to a coordinating council fund for that purpose.

Camp life for deserving boys and Boy Scouts will open July 6 at Camp Rokili, with a girls' camp beginning June 13 at Camp Irvine.

VANCE DETAINED BY GUN HUNT

Search for a nickel-plated revolver alleged to have fired a shot into the spine of Harold Marshall, 24, Laguna Beach taxi driver, today was holding up return from Oregon of Gerald Vance, 18, suspect in the kidnap-shooting.

Vance, arrested in Medford, Ore., is to be returned here for trial on possible kidnap charges.

Fulton Edgar DeBord, 18, picked up in Huntington Beach the day after Marshall was slugged, robbed and shot on the Laguna canyon road June 18, already is in jail and probably will face a similar charge.

Deputy Sheriff James Workman, sent to Oregon to return Vance, telegraphed today he had taken Vance into custody and would search along the roadside where Vance said he threw his revolver as he neared Medford.

More Shouts for President Roosevelt

Here are two camera closeups of demonstrations in honor of President Roosevelt on the Democratic convention floor after his name was put before the delegates for renomination. Left: Mrs. Anna Roosevelt Boettiger (left), daughter, and Mrs. James Roosevelt, daughter-in-law of the President; helped out in the cheering. CONVENTION SIDELIGHTS

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—There was an ugly rumor going the rounds of the Democratic national convention today concerning the ability of America's professional grade cracker, "One-Eyed" Connelly, to keep people from crashing gates. Several days ago Connelly ingratiated himself with Chairman James A. Farley to the extent that he did not have to crash the gate. They gave him a job watching it.

But Connelly was so busy shaking hands with newsmen and delegates thronging into the hall that two small boys slipped past him. They spread the news that night that Gate 8 was the easiest to crash.

Suddenly Connelly vanished from the scene.

"Where's Connelly?" asked newsmen of a uniformed guard.

"Oh, he's upstairs in a soft seat. He got canned down here."

"What was the matter?"

"Too many people crashed the gate on him."

Special policemen have been assigned to hotel entrances to keep convention throngs moving.

"Move on, move on," one of them shouted, "and don't slug in the clinches."

Late for the convention session, a tottering delegate stepped into a busy street, hailed a government mail truck and tried to get into it in the belief it was a taxi. The driver grinned, shook his head and drove on.

The Democrats abrogated the two-thirds rule but a check of the convention's applause indicator showed the "ones" made more noises than the votes for scrapping the rule.

The recording:
Yes—58 decibels.
Noes—64 decibels.

Sound technicians hastened to explain, however, that "no" has a deeper sound volume than "yes." They also pointed out that persons in the galleries participated in the voice vote.

Ashton Dovell, speaker of the Virginia house of delegates, tore up a sign which said, "Virginia wants Roosevelt, to hell with Al!"

"I like the sentiment, but not the language," Dovell said.

PONZI IS SUED FOR DIVORCE

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP)—Mrs. Rose Ponzi, whose marriage to Charles Ponzi, "financial wizard" of 1920, brought her riches of short duration, sought a divorce today.

Ponzi was deported to his native Italy in the summer of 1934 following two prison terms for fraud in alleged dealings of international postal reply coupons.

His American-born wife sought a divorce on the grounds her husband had served more than five years in prison, a statutory basis for divorce in Massachusetts.

"When he was down, when he was in trouble, when he was in prison, I stuck to him," Mrs. Ponzi said. "When he had millions, when he had mansions, when he had cars, I stuck with him. And now I feel that I have proved my loyalty through thick and thin, and I intend to secure a quiet divorce."

Ponzi is now reported to be a tourist agent and guide in Rome.

PONZI COMMENTS ON WIFE'S ACTION

ROME (AP)—Charles Ponzi, the former Boston "financial wizard," commented today that his American-born wife's suit for divorce "is tragic but more rational than a suicide pact."

New French Party Is Organized

PARIS (AP)—Col. Francois de la Roquette, organizer of the militant political group "Croix de Feu," proclaimed today the organization of a rightist "French social party" with a nucleus of one million members.

The new party, he said, would try "for a decisive assault toward the renovation, reconciliation, and reconstruction of France."

SYMPATHIZERS IN PICKERS STRIKE EXPLAIN STAND

In order to tell their interpretation of the citrus labor strike, a group of persons sympathizing with the orange pickers today made public a detailed statement of the situation as they see it. The statement was given to The Journal by Eleanor V. Ghiselin of Laguna Beach. She said she belongs to the Public Works and Unemployment union and that the article was sponsored by herself and Rex Corson, Corona Del Mar, of the lathers' union; Mrs. Margaret Corson, of the Public Works and Unemployment union; Roy Alonzo of Orange, of the central strike committee, and Gus Felix, of the Orange pickers' union.

"Since 1929 the wages of the orange pickers have been gradually dropping due to wage cuts and the rise in the cost of living of about 40 per cent in the last four years. Conditions and regulations which have been imposed upon the pickers, and the refusal of the growers to rectify those conditions, have made it impossible for the average picker to maintain a living at all, and of necessity forced the pickers to strike."

"On April 24 the growers were presented with a petition, which was completely ignored by the growers. The petitioners denied any sort of hearing."

In substance, the petition said the workers desired to get an understanding with the growers to avoid future misunderstandings and that they wished to know exactly the conditions under which they were to work. The petition said they desired recognition of their union and the right to bargain collectively. It asked for a wage of 40 cents per hour for a nine hour day, that 30 boxes of fruit be used as a day basis computation and that thereafter the pay should be seven cents per box.

The petition said that on this basis no bonus was expected and that under this arrangement the pickers would work until the end of the season unless actual cause for quitting should arise. It was requested that employers give preference to local laborers, furnish their transportation free and provide working equipment.

This petition, as presented to The Journal, bore the signatures of Esteban Muniz and William Velard.

'Pickers Have Right'

The statement presented by Eleanor Ghiselin continues:

"The right of the orange pickers to be a voice in the regulations of their means of subsistence is a fundamental condition of American democracy and should be recognized and supported as such by all fair minded persons."

"Some of the abuses which the pickers have had to put up with are: 1. The deduction of money by some packing houses from the pickers' checks for stems that were too long, overfilled boxes, not well filled boxes, and shiners, or oranges that were bruised or broken. 2. The imposition of the bonus system, that is, in existence in Orange county only, resulted in $400 being denied the orange pickers by two associations alone, in the Valencia season of 1935, and many similar cases in other houses."

"3. Regulations—picking bottoms (fruit near the ground), and frozen fruit (fruit that cannot be used) only; first breaking clusters first, and sizing oranges."

"4. Foreman's abuses—pickers pay for sacks, clippers and transportation; all pickers having their own cars nevertheless were forced to ride in the foreman's truck or were discriminated against in certain houses. A charge for drinking water made by some foremen in certain houses at the rate of five cents per day while on duty. Cases of the foreman having cashed pickers' checks without the consent of the picker, for the purpose of making certain deductions."

"5. One group at Fullerton at one time told the workers that the company had sustained losses on the market and demanded that the workers contribute one dollar each from their pay checks to cover the loss. Those who refused to comply with this arbitrary measure were promptly discharged."

"6. High rent—in most cases the workers are compelled to live in company owned or company controlled houses paying exorbitant rents. The average worker's yearly income amounts to $280, and the annual rent averages $156."

"The prorate is also a factor which greatly lowers the earning power of the workers, in that as orders are filled, the men may only be required to work part of the day or part of the week. As the season is very short, only lasting six months, and does not afford a substantial wage for that duration of time due to the decreasing number of oranges on the trees (which is due to the repetition of pickings) toward the end of the season, the wage paid must be high enough to afford a decent standard of living. Such is not the case."

"Strike Gives Strength"
"The strike is gaining strength, and is receiving the support of numerous organizations, in Los Angeles the central labor council, the Public Works and Unemployment union, the International Labor Defense, and others, which realize the justice of the orange pickers' demands. At the present time there are 4000 orange pickers on strike throughout Orange and Los Angeles counties, with the same demands and facing the same conditions."

AAA PAYMENT BILL SIGNED BY F.D.R.

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Roosevelt yesterday signed a bill to give the secretary of agriculture "final and conclusive" power to determine the correct base acreage and production figures for the adjustment of the old AAA contracts.

A senate report on the measure said enactment would "release for payment from 40,000 to 50,000 cases which under the interpretation of the general accounting office could not be certified for payment."

"The equities in these cases are clear, and it has been administratively determined that the United States government is morally obligated to make these payments," the report added.

The liquor tax administration act, revising wine tax rates sharply downward, also was signed into law Friday by the President.

Legislation which advocates said was designed to assure efficient crews on American ships also was signed into law by the President. It combined several recommendations of the commerce department and included provisions requiring certificates of service, the maintenance of continuous discharge books, new examinations and eight hour watches for seamen.

An Instance When The Last Line Tells The Story

NEW YORK (AP)—A bread line for pigeons in the heart of the Fifth avenue shopping district was doomed today by a court order.

Magistrate Earl A. Smith had Cleo Long, who fed the hungry birds three meals a day, sign a promise yesterday that she would discontinue the project.

Denna Denny, a neighbor of the defendant, made the complaint—her apartment has a balcony.

WHITE LAUDS WEATHER AT ROKILI

"Boy, was it swell weather up there!" reminisced Harrison White, county Boy Scout executive who popped into town yesterday from Camp Rokili.

"Fifty degrees this morning, and nice and cool at noon," he huddled. "Those kids who go up there next week ought to like it." He mopped his brow.

He was referring to the first quota of several hundred deserving Santa Ana boys who might not have any camping this year were it not for the donations of local citizens, contributing to a coordinating council camping fund.

The first load of youngsters will arrive at camp July 6. After July 13 a similar camp for girls will be started at Camp Irvine, with a possibility more boys may be sent there after the girls' camp is over.

Outdoor sports, hiking, supervised recreation, and lots of good food are promised for the camp period. The first load of food—three tons of it—has already been taken to the camp.

BEAN CROP SOLD OUT
GOLETA (AP)—The lima bean crop of 1935 of Santa Barbara county was cleaned out of the County Growers association warehouse here today, the earliest cleanup in many years.

GAINES NOW FISHING
LYLE MORSE SHINES
BUSHMAN WALK-OUT

From Virginia Lakes in the High Sierras comes a first-hand fishing report from Nelson (Brickdust) Gaines, The Journal's rambling county editor who is vacationing with rod and reel.

"Lots of fish here, but most of them are small," writes the red-head, whose Placencia party is surrounded by 11 lakes and what Brick jokingly estimates as 11,000 fishermen.

Every lake in the north is filled with fish averaging about six inches. "The only way to get the larger ones is to rent a boat at two bucks per day."

"We're surrounded by snow. Drifts eight and 10 feet deep all around here, and yet it's nearly as warm as at home. Thus far I have been forced to wear only a jacket-wool shirt (and pants, of course).

"If any of your friends are thinking of coming up here, tell 'em to come at night. Start before midnight if possible," he says. The hot weather stopped lots of cars, including Brick's. Gasoline boils in the lines. Result: vapor and a stalled car.

Gaines will be back at his desk July 6 with some good fishing tales, no doubt.

"Lyle Morse Pitches No-Hit Game."

That headline, in bold-face type, appeared in print up north Wednesday after the Porterville righthander, a Santa Ana who twirled for the Stars in their spring exhibitions, electrified the fans with a 3-1 victory over Delano in San Joaquin Valley league night.

A three-base error and a passed ball manufactured Delano's only run off Morse in the second.

Porterville is currently tied with Hanford for second place—one game back of Visalia. There, the club that has sent for Louie (The Great) Neva, is trailing Delano by three games, and is next to Lindsay of the cellar.

County league night (item: Hugh Saltsbury, Irving Fletcher, and Richie Kramer, Anaheim second-basemen, are headed for Huntington Beach the second half, reports Secretary Walt Collins.

Umpire John Ireland's ball-and-strike officiating displeased Pitcher Al Bushman of Orange so much that he threw down his glove and "walked out" during the fifth inning against Santa Ana last night.

It was a direct insult to the arbiter, who was the object of bitter remarks from the sprinkling of fans. The game was not to appear to blame Bushman for quitting.

Bushman's walk-out act was at least original. Most twirlers, when the umpiring seems against them, resort to fancy bickering, but keep right on pitching.

Ireland's guessing for Roger Larimer, relief chucker, met with more popular favor.

HIGH SCHOOL POOL OPENS

Andrews gymnasium swimming pool on the Santa Ana High school campus will be opened to the public Monday for aquatic instruction as well as recreation.

Norman Paul, graduate of U. S. C., will supervise the plunge.

Misses Marian Parsons, graduate of Occidental, and Elizabeth Downey, graduate of Pomona, will be in charge of swimming instruction for girls. Jess Haxton, who taught swimming at the junior college, will be in charge of the boys under the following schedule:

Monday, Wednesday and Friday—10 a. m. to 10:45 a. m., beginning girls; 10:45 a. m. to 11:30 a. m., advanced girls.

Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday, 10 a. m. to 10:45 a. m., beginning boys; 10:45 to 11:30 a. m., advanced boys.

A special adult swimming class will be opened at the evening session if demand warrants. The plunge will operate from 10 a. m. to 12 noon; 1 p. m. to 5 p. m., and 7 p. m. to 9 p. m. A 10-cent admission charge will be made to cover shower, towel and checking service.

Oakland Goes Into Weekend Series With Narrow Lead

Oakland held a precarious lead, with three other closely-bunched teams mathematical first-place possibilities, as Coast league teams moved into week-end series today.

The Oaks easily won their third successive game from the Missions 6-1, while the second place Seattle Indians trounced San Francisco's Seals 7-1. Portland dropped a 4-3 contest to Los Angeles. The victory put the aroused Seraphs in a tie for sixth with the Seals. San Diego evened its series with Sacramento by grabbing a 3-2 decision.

Plate power generated by Tom Denney, George Preble, Tommy Young and Ray Smith carried Santa Ana's Stars to victory, 6 to 4, over Orange in the National Night Ball league's first-half fade-out at the Municipal bowl last night.

Shelled for 11 hits in the early innings, Al Bushman became so disgusted with the ball-and-strike umpiring of John Ireland that he walked out of the box during a fifth-inning rally by the Stars, who were checked the rest of the distance by the relief twirling of young Roger Larimer.

Denney Vacations
Denney, Los Angeles Roosevelt High coach who feels he needs a vacation, made his exit with Santa Ana in a blaze of glory with four singles in five swings. Denney will not play again with the Stars until—and if—they gain the play-offs with Huntington Beach in September.

Righthander "Doc" Smith of the Lackaye lads was not content with two fielding gems. He hit a double and a single as well. In the seventh the doctor staged a neat act of discovery by racing down to rightfield to deprive Second-Baseman "Whitey" Pee of a home run with a beautiful running catch over his head. Smith made another difficult catch of Walt Gunther's drive in the eighth.

The hustling Young kept his batting mark far above 400 with two doubles and a single; and Preble, the boy who gives the ball a square rap, poled two singles and a double and was walked in five times to the plate.

Red Ballard, Santa Ana's graceful outfielder, hit one of his infrequent home runs into the left-center with none aboard in the second. Liston (Memphy) Hill, Orange's playing manager, knocked the first ball pitched by Jimmy Coates far into centerfield for a homer. Walt Leitch, pitcher for a homer, hit one of his infrequent home runs into the left-center with none aboard in the second. Liston (Memphy) Hill, Orange's playing manager, knocked the first ball pitched by Jimmy Coates far into centerfield for a homer.

Orange gained a 2-0 lead in the first, but Santa Ana earned both runs back in the same frame, and then kept out in front, 5-2, 4-2, 4-3, 6-5, 6-4.

Coates, gradually regaining his old-time form since the "flu," fanned 11 to Bushman's 2 and Larimer's 3.

The Stars will remain idle until next Thursday night when they play an exhibition with the New York Globe Trotters, U. S. negro champs, at the Municipal bowl. Manager Lackaye and his wife will leave Monday on a two-day trip to San Francisco. Clarence (Nan) Coates, first-baseman, took a lay-off last night. Young played with a deep cut in his left hand.

(By the Associated Press)
CURT DAVIS, Cubs—Pitched six-hit ball in 3-1 win over Giants. GUS SUHR, Pirates—Hit homer in ninth as Bees were beaten 2-1.

Every game was marked by pitcher-hitter duets that were responsible for victory.

Lou Koupal, Seattle's star flinger, gave San Francisco only three hits, while Jerry Donovan, Seal cast-off, bludgeoned in six of the Indians' seven counters.

Los Angeles came from behind in the ninth inning to whip Portland 10-1, while the Seals double scored two runners and overcame a one-run lead. Dutch Leiber, who went the route for the winners, was invincible after the fourth inning, allowing only two hits.

Louie Neva, the Russian terror, failed to show up for his scheduled pitching exhibition with Jack Dugan of Olive last night, but the Huntington Beach fans saw Russ Coggan, their No. 2 twirler, easily handiwork Ben Gelker's Greasers, 7 to 2, at Huntington Beach.

Neva has been busy earning a few dollars in the softball-crazy community of San Pedro, and plans to leave soon—probably next week—to join Tulare of the San Joaquin Valley league. He will be subject to recall by Manager Joe Rodgers any time during the second half.

Olive outdid the first-half champions, 12 to 11, but it was the same old story of the Oilers hitting when they needed runs. Willard Bath and Joe Wallin led the assault for Olive. Bill McKinley and George Murray for Huntington Beach.

Herman Kornder, utility second-sacker, smashed out three hits while Anaheim easily turned back Westminster, 5 to 1, at Anaheim. Return of Jean Arroues, French outfielder who has been forced out of retirement, and lanky Fred Wiseman had the Valencia's at full strength. Joe Hosack hit three

DAVISCOURT TO EXTEND PICO ROMERO BEATEN BY PABLO DANO

While he may not realize it, Don Juan Olaguivall-Pico, the sensational Basque-Mexican heavy-weight wrestler who has won four consecutive matches here, beating Casey Columbo, Bill Sledge, Bill Bartush and the giant Thor Johnson, faces his most dangerous opponent at the Orange County Athletic club Monday night when he opposes the veteran rougher, Dirty Dick Daviscourt.

Daviscourt and the 225-pound Basque-Mexican clash in the secondary feature of a card which features Nick Lutze and Bill Hansen, the Salt Lake contender.

When Champion Vincent Lopez passed up Olaguivall-Pico again this week, Daviscourt demanded and received the match, mainly because Promoter Sampson wanted to give the Basque a real test.

Two one-fall matches feature the popular Steve Strelch, known hereabouts as the "Terrible Swede," against Wildman Zinn and Rudy Skarda. Finn heavy-weight, vs. Count Casimir.

MAJOR LEAGUE ALL-STARS PICKED FOR JULY GAME

BOSTON. (AP)—The National and American league all-star team will take the field here July 7 with two of the most spectacular rookies in many years on opposing teams.

Joe DiMaggio, brilliant Yankee outfielder, and Stuart Martin, Cards' infielder, each in his first year in the majors, made the grade in a nationwide poll of baseball fans conducted by newspapers to decide 16 of the 21 players to represent each league in the mid-season classic.

Joe McCarthy of the Yankees and Charley Grimm of the Cubs were named rival managers, and each will select the other five players.

The material from which they may choose still includes such stars as Al Simmons, Joe Cronin, Mel Harder, Joe Vosmik, Frankie Frisch, Paul Waner, Pepper Martin, and 11 other participants in last year's fixture, all of whom failed to gain places in the balloting this year.

"Dizzy" Dean led all players with 41,900 votes with Charlie Gehring a close second with 41,754, Gabby Hartnett third with 41,385, and Bob Grove fourth with 40,640.

The National league squad: Outfielders—Joe Medwick, Cards; Mel Ott and Joe Moore, Giants; Wally Berger, Bees, Frank Demaree, Cubs.

Infielders—Bill Herman, Cubs; Arky Vaughan, Pirates; Bill Terry, Giants; Stuart Martin, Cards; Pinky Whitney, Phillies.

Pitchers—Dizzy Dean, Cards; Carl Hubbell, Giants; Van Mungo, Dodgers; Lon Warneke, Chicago.

Catchers—Gabby Hartnett, Cubs; Ernie Lombardi, Reds.

The American league squad: Outfielders—Joe DiMaggio, and George Selkirk, Yankees; Earl Averill, Indians; Ray Radcliff, White Sox; Ben Chapman, Senators.

Infielders—Charley Gehring, Tigers; Luke Appling, White Sox; Lou Gehrig, Yankees; Jimmy Foss, Red Sox; Pinky Higgins, Athletics.

MISS JACOBS RALLIES AT WIMBLEDON

Bitsy Grant Eliminates McGrath of Australia in Men's Singles

WIMBLEDON, Eng. (AP)—Helen Jacobs gained the quarter-final round of women's singles in the all-England tennis championships today, defeating the Countess Lili de la Valden of France and Spain, 6-4, 6-3.

After trailing 3-4 in the first set, the United States champion began mixing lazy, floating chop-shots with fiery cross-court smashes that the countess better known to the tennis world as Lili de Alvarez, could not handle.

Miss Jacobs broke through her rival's service in the ninth game to clinch the set, easily holding her own service in the succeeding game.

The countess played brilliantly in spots but the cool precision of Miss Jacobs' game quickly wore her down in the second set.

Dorothy Andrus of Stanford, Conn. and New York, was eliminated in another third-round match by the veteran French woman, Mme. Simone Mathieu, 6-4, 4-6, 6-2.

Looking more than ever like a giant killer, Bryan M. (Bitsy) Grant of Atlanta, forged into the quarter-finals of men's singles with an easy 6-3, 6-4, 6-0 victory over Vivian McGrath of Australia.

Jack Crawford of Australia moved into the quarter-finals of men's singles with a 7-5, 6-4, 9-7 triumph over H. G. N. Lee of England.

Wilmer Allison and John Van Ryn, one of the favored American pairs, eliminated Pierre Pelizza and Yvon Petra of France in a second round doubles match, 6-1, 7-5, 6-2.

Playing like a sparkling new edition of "Little Bill" Johnston, Grant won after wave of applause with his spectacular recoveries of McGrath's burning corner-dusters.

Bitsy's short legs fairly flew over the court as he made seemingly impossible returns and all but broke McGrath's heart with his flawless stroking.

Wherever the ball came Bitsy was there to fire it back. If a single rally had lasted all afternoon, it seemed, Grant would have been perfectly satisfied. Sooner or later he knew McGrath would make an error. And sooner or later in most of the long rallies that was just what did happen.

Grant's new opponent, on Monday, will be the redoubtable Fred Perry of England, who is bidding for his third consecutive Wimbledon crown.

Two other events were on the program—the 220-yard breast stroke, starring Katy Rawls of Miami, and the 440-yard free style, which was expected to go again to Mrs. Lenore Knight Wingard of Homestead, Pa.

Miss Rawls won her sixth straight 300 meters individual medley championship yesterday in a romp. A third successive victory in the 880-yard relay championship sent the Washington Athletic club team from Seattle into a first place team tie with the Women's Swimming association of New York with 11 points.

Levisky Victory Is Unimpressive

The Chicago heavyweight won the decision after 10 rounds of slow-motion fighting.

WYKOFF AND BRIGHT WIN

By ROBERT MYERS
Associated Press Sports Writer
LOS ANGELES.—Final events in the far western tryouts for the American Olympic track and field team were set to be run off today in Memorial coliseum.

Members of the local Olympic committee optimistically hoped for a crowd of at least 5000. They had a right to expect that many because they told 5000 fans who turned out for last night's opening program to come back today—admission free.

The night meet proved a dismal boomer when a number of contestants failed to show up as had been promised. There were more officials on the field than athletes.

Norman Bright of San Francisco's Olympic club, clinching a place in the final trials in New York July 11-12, contributed the only sparkle to the evening's entertainment in winning the 5000-meter run. His time was 14 minutes 52.6 seconds.

Clicking off the last lap of the distance in 61 seconds, he turned back young Louis Zamperini of Torrance and Fabian Lerriaga of the Mexican Athletic club.

Entry lists in several events failed to materialize by starting time, and scheduled heats were postponed until today.

In his "come-back" campaign, won the dash in the good time of 10.6 seconds—good in view of the fact that he eased up 25 feet from the finish when he saw he was not pressed. Bob Graham of Whitman college, Walla Walla, Wash., was second, and Ben Rams, Sacramento Junior college, "beat."

In the other 100-meter "heat," Mack Robinson and Tommy Nelson of Pasadena J. C., and Bryant Allen, Los Angeles High school negro, coasted down the track together, Robinson edging out in front to win in 11-2 seconds.

Robinson came back to win his "heat" in the 200 meters in 21.5 seconds, and Graham was timed the same in taking his test.

Pirates, Giants Threatened By Cincinnati in National

By SID FEDER
Associated Press Sports Writer

The Cincinnati Reds, whose association with the National league cellar was so constant it had become more or less of a habit until Manager Charlie Dressen took them over, are threatening to do a Max Schmeling on the experts this season.

While the Pirates and the Giants have been fighting it out at the tail-end of the first division, the red-hot Reds, previously rated no better than the sixth place they held last year, have been creeping up until they now are only two games out of that select set.

Several Factors

A general pitching improvement, particularly in Al Hollingsworth, is largely responsible, but along with this are such factors as the comeback of Kiki Cuyler, the snappy first-base work of Les Carrasella, recent importation from Toronto, and the improved hitting of shortstop Billy Myers and Second-Sacker Alex Kempouris.

The Reds stamped a current winning streak to five games yesterday, with Cuyler and Lew Riggs hammering home their tiny victory worth chalked up his eighth victory at the expense of the Phillies, 11-6.

The Giants dropped back into fourth place, after a third-place run of only a day, when the Cubs clawed them 3-1, as Curt Davis pitched six-hit ball.

Subs Hits Homer

The Pirates reclaimed third-place by nosing out the Boston Bees, 2-1, with Red Lucas the victor over Danny MacFayden in a tight hurling duel, on the strength of Gus Suhr's homer in the ninth.

At the same time, the Cardinals were hanging onto their tiny lead over the Cubs by coming from behind to beat the hapless Dodgers 6-1.

The only American league game resulted in an 8-7 victory for the Cleveland Indians over the Red Sox when Joe Vosmik broke up the proceedings with a home run in the tenth, shoving the Sox to 6½ games behind the pace-setting Yan.

By T. N. (BRICK) GAINES

By ANNE VAN STEENBERGH
(Battling for Gains)

TODAY let's talk of many things, including the need of supervised playgrounds for small communities. It seems to be an accepted fact that children in suburban districts do not need the playground facilities that are deemed a necessity in cities, the theory being, I suppose, that in the country they have plenty of yard space, a few home duties to perform, and that is all that is needed to make them happy useful children. But that theory, like many others, does not always work.

My attention has been arrested many times the past week by different groups of boys and girls, gathered on the home lawn, idling down the village street, sitting disconsolately on the curb, or in an expression of utter boredom on their faces and in their attitude. Children suddenly turned loose after nine or ten months of planned work and directed activities, and given a freedom which they do not know how to use.

I stopped my car near a group of five boys, yesterday, sitting on the grass in the front yard, digging their bare toes in the ground, desultorily tossing a ball and scrapping among themselves.

Finally one of them stood up and said, "Hi fellers, come on," and they all rose expectantly, for a moment their faces brightened as they responded with "Aw right," "Whatchu goin' to do?"

The ring leader stood still, looked up and down the street and then said disgustedly, "Aw nuthin', there ain't nuthin' to do." And all five sank dejectedly back on the grass.

Tragically enough, it was true, there wasn't anything for those twelve-year-olds to do, but there should be. It isn't fair to plan their lives for three-fourths of the year then turn them out and expect them to take the initiative for the other fourth.

An interesting incident occurred in a branch of the county library recently, when a Japanese lad some 10 years of age entered the library and told the custodian that he had come to take out some books if she had any that were good. The librarian directed him to the juvenile section, but he said he was not interested in those "baby books," and carefully inspected the books on the non-fiction shelves. History, biography and science he carefully reviewed. At last he seemed to find something he had been looking for and approached the desk, his face shining with eagerness.

"I'll take this," he said, proffering the book, which proved to be Wentworth's Advanced Arithmetic. The librarian asked him if he knew what the book was about. "Oh yes, Missis, it's just what I want, in two weeks I bring it back and get it again." And he did.

We think the Happy Workers society of the Presbyterian church at Westminster ought to be presented with a medal for loyalty and service to their church and community. Twenty-five years ago a group of women of the Presbyterian church met and organized a society to assist in the support of the church. They called themselves the "Happy Workers." As a means of earning money they decided to have a dinner the fourth Wednesday of each month, the price to be 10 cents. The first dinner was served the fourth Wednesday in March, 1911, and the last one to night to be served last Wednesday, and for all we know the society may continue to serve them for the next hundred years.

However, the price has changed during the years. In 1919 it was raised from 10 to 15 cents, and in 1922, in fear of trembling, the price was boosted to 25 cents and has remained at that price. And what a dinner!

The first president of the Happy Workers was Mrs. Mary Reed, now living in Long Beach. Mrs. Linda McDaniel is the present president. The living charter members include Mrs. O. C. Hare and Mrs. Frank Grandy, Westminster, still active members; Mrs. Elta Wright, Los Angeles; Mrs. Castleman, Huntington Park; Mrs. E. Snyder and Mrs. Helen Snyder Schnitzer, Garden Grove; and Miss Boise, Santa Ana.

Midway City is bustling with activity these days, so much property is changing hands, so many lots being sold and new homes built, that Ed Hensley, president of the local chamber of commerce, realtor and baseball fan, is busier than the legendary paper hanger. Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Epps are building their fourth house. Mrs. Epps, you know, is that extremely clever little woman who dons overalls and carpenters' right along beside her husband. In all the houses they have built they have never had any help except with the wiring and the plumbing.

Sometimes when we have trouble driving a nail to hang the whisk broom on or try to fix a recalcitrant door or bang our fingers and life seems very hard, we go out and drive slowly past the house Mrs. Epps is working on, perhaps calmly nailing shingles on the roof, or doing some other difficult thing with the greatest of ease, and we decide that if only

SUNSET BEACH SEWER PLANS HALTED BY INJUNCTION

FRAUD CLAIM PRESSED BY C. A. NEIL

Block Opening of Bids on $45,000 Project;
Hearing July 3

SUNSET BEACH.—Opening of bids for Sunset Beach's proposed new $45,000 sewer system and outfall sewer, scheduled for last night, was blocked late yesterday when C. A. Neil of that city obtained a temporary restraining order from Presiding Judge G. K. Scovel in department 3 of Orange county superior court.

Neil, describing himself as a freeholder and declaring his property would be subject to taxation for the sewer system, brought the actions on grounds plans for the sewer were changed after an election had been called. He said directors of the Sunset Beach sanitary district on Jan. 21 called a bond election for Feb. 15 and that a $45,000 bond issue was passed. The original election call, he alleged, provided a sewer system with disposal plant, but before the election plans were changed to include an outfall sewer. This was done, he claimed, without proper hearing and with knowledge of the objections of taxpayers and voters. Had the facts been known, the bond issue would have been defeated, Neil alleged in his petition. Opening bids and awarding a contract would result in a fraud, he charged.

Judge Scovel issued the temporary restraining order, turning it for further argument in his court Friday, July 3, at 2 p. m.

Named defendants in the action were the Sunset Beach sanitary district and its directors, C. M. Earll, S. H. Neil, Robert Gilchrist, Al Jenkins, and C. W. Pierce.

The history of Poland was read by Marjorie Baker and several current events concerning Poland were read by girls in costume. Election of officers will be the chief business to come before the unit at the next meeting July 9. The executive board will meet in the home of the president, Mrs. Kathryn Allen, July 6.

Destroyed Well
Is Purchased

HUNTINGTON BEACH.—The Bruce well on Ocean Avenue between Fifteenth and Sixteenth streets has been sold to Allen Brown, an independent oil operator. The purchase price is reported to be $7526, to the Bruce estate, and $3323, to the George Cheatum interest.

The Bruce well is one of the wells whittacked into the Ocean tideland pool below Sixteenth, and at one time was a good producer. It had some trouble staying on production and the derrick was finally destroyed by fire started from a burning truck at the adjoining well.

LAGUNA BEACH.—Including among attractions arranged for the Fourth of July celebration here is a grand fireworks display, under direction of members of the local post of the American Legion. The city council has agreed to donate a limited amount to help defray expense, and it is hoped to raise the balance by popular subscription. Gene Douglas, commander of the Legion post, in charge of arrangements, will accept voluntary subscriptions for the fireworks fund at the Forest Avenue garage.

BEACH CITY LAUNCHES FIGHT FOR TIDELAND REVENUES

HUNTINGTON BEACH.—This city today was considering plans for launching its 1936 fight to share in revenues from slant drilling into tideland pools here, spurred by the announcement that several initiative petitions asking legalization of whippstock wells had been filed at Sacramento.

Ever since the discovery of the huge tideland oil pool lying offshore here Huntington Beach has been striving to obtain a portion of the wealth pumped out daily. The pool has been called the richest ever located.

Two bills to legalize the drilling went through both senate and assembly last year, but did not receive the governor's signature. Huntington Beach stood to profit under several plans presented.

One of the bills now proposed, if passed, would legalize nearly 80 wells in the town lot field already drilled into the tideland pool, and would give the state and city a percentage of the gross income. Many of the whippstock wells have been shut down by court action, while others have been forced to pay royalties to the state. Huntington Beach has never received any royalties from these wells.

The Huntington Beach slant-drilling program developed after voters turned down a tideland drilling proposal several years ago. At that time it was proposed to build piers and drill approximately 70 wells in the ocean fronting Huntington Beach. The statewide campaign on the issue was one of the most bitterly fought in the state's history.

So today the city launched a new search for some means whereby the municipality can share in the revenue received from the tideland oil. The county is expected to battle for its share also, before any bill gets before the people.

New Paper Born
at Laguna Beach

LAGUNA BEACH.—The art colony today chalked up another victory for community growth and development by adding another newspaper to the three already published here.

The new member of the fourth estate made its debut Thursday under the familiar name of "Laguna Life," once the leading publication in "the village," but later absorbed by the South Coast News. The new publication, distributed free, is published by the South Coast News, of Laguna Beach.

With three other papers in the field, The South Coast News, the Laguna Herald, and the Laguna Town Crier, the advent of the fourth one in a community of the size of Laguna establishes a record for journalistic enterprise, it was thought.

Arthur Ames of Santa Ana Says
Murals Are Permanent Art

(Laguna Beach is not the only spot in our county that boasts its artistic citizens. In other parts of the county live those who are doing exceptional work of the beachside art colony. Some of these will be introduced from time to time in The Journal. Arthur Ames and his work are described.)

By MRS. L. B. SMALLEY

Today this column switches its attention from the Laguna art colony and considers artists to be found in other places in Orange county. It heads the list with Arthur Ames.

Arthur came down from the north, San Francisco, eight years ago, and located in Santa Ana. From the fact that he studied at the California School of Fine Arts his paintings have a different atmosphere in technique.

The murals of the old masters, Giotto, Michael Angelo and Raphael, inspired him to go right on from where they left off some 300 years ago. PWA was so impressed with his Renaissance method of painting they engaged him to paint the murals in the Alexander Hamilton High school in Los Angeles.

Then his second work for the government was in painting the murals in the Anaheim public library.

"A fine job," said the eastern director of the federal project when he saw the 300 paintings done by 100 California artists, and exhibited at the Los Angeles art museum.

L. A. OFFICER
SPEAKER

ORANGE.—Kenneth Scudder, head of the probation department of Los Angeles county, spoke before the Rotary club Thursday, and told how the stealing of fruit and vegetables in large markets was stopped, last year.

Mexican boys from 7 to 13 years old were stealing $20,000 to $40,000 worth of fruit and vegetables each year, he said. The boys would go to the markets at 4 o'clock in the morning, and under the pretense of seeking to help unload the trucks, would steal and carry the articles home.

Through the co-ordinated groups of Rotary clubs, assistance was given the probation department. A Mexican prize fighter, Bert Colina, went from house to house and talked to the boys, showing them the error of their ways. To him belongs a large share of the success in breaking up the practice, the speaker said. The Rotary clubs were instrumental in bringing them into the All-nations club, he added, and the ring was broken up.

The new president, Herb Nichols, was installed during the meeting, and escorted to his post by Stanley Mansur, Ben Brubaker, B. D. Stanley, Don Smiley and Walter Weimer. The president then appointed M. M. Fishback to serve as program chairman for the coming year. A past president's pin was presented to Dr. E. B. McAulay by Mansur, on behalf of the club. A gift of $50 was presented to the student loan fund of the local high school by the club.

The program for the day includes aquatic sports, fishing, and a dance in the Balboa pavilion Monday evening.

ARMY COMES TO NEWPORT BAY

NEWPORT-BALBOA.—More than 250 members of the March Field ground force will "capture" Newport Harbor Monday, when the group holds its annual organization day here. The event was arranged with the cooperation of Mayor Harry H. Williamson.

The program for the day includes aquatic sports, fishing, and a dance in the Balboa pavilion Monday evening. The men will be under the command of Lieut. Guy F. Hix, U. S. army pilot. Arrangements were made by Sergts. F. W. Smith, P. M. Helwig and Fred Borchers, who made the trip to Balboa this week. The entire force will be given a trip of inspection over the bay.

Bible Dramas at Church Services

TUSTIN.—Music and Bible dramas will be featured in the program to be presented tomorrow night in the Tustin Presbyterian church as the evening service, when students who have been attending the summer church school demonstrate the work they have been doing in their classes for the past three weeks.

FIRE CREW GETS NEW QUARTERS

Eight members of the state forestry inspection crew in this district, headed by State Forest Ranger Joe Scherman, will move into new forestry headquarters at East Chapman and Water streets, Orange, next week.

The new headquarters of the forestry division are nearly completed, after several months of work, and the expenditure of $35,000. Trucks and fire fighting equipment will be moved to the division warehouse this week from the old headquarters on South Olive street.

No official date for the opening of the headquarters has been set yet, Scherman said today. The new buildings will include an inspection crew barracks, residence, warehouse and office. A garage for equipment housing is under construction.

Fourteen miles of telephone communication to outlying forest ranger stations also are nearing completion, Scherman said, with the one into Trabuco canyon virtually finished at this time.

The forestry headquarters for this division of the state have been located in Orange since 1931. The department gives fire protection to state parks, county lands and all outlying districts.

Pickford-Lasky Pictures Suspend

HOLLYWOOD. (AP)—Temporary suspension of activity by Mary Pickford and Jesse Lasky's film company stirred speculation today in studio circles on whether the venture ultimately will be dissolved.

The Pickford-Lasky Productions, Inc., organized a few months ago, has released one picture. Another is scheduled to be completed before the announced suspension takes effect.

Miss Pickford contemplates a trip to Europe for pleasure and for business in connection with the United Artists Distribution corporation, it was stated.

BROADWAY OFFERS NEW LOMBARD FILM

PICTURE IS NEW MURDER MYSTERY

Co-Stars in 'San Francisco'

Clark Gable and Jeanette MacDonald, who furnish the real entertainment in "San Francisco," which opened at the Fox West Coast theater Friday. Gable is at his best as a rough and tough type while Miss MacDonald charms with her beauty and singing.

They Help to 'Educate Father'

Below is a scene taken from "Educating Father," which opens at the Fox Broadway theater on Sunday. Shirley Deane, Jed Prouty and Spring Byington play leading roles in the second of the Jones Family entries, a worthy successor to "Every Saturday Night."

O'BRIEN STARS IN NEW FILM

A fast moving picture of the Northwest Mounted Police with George O'Brien in the leading role will open at the Fox Broadway theater next Thursday and run through the Fourth of July. The picture is "The Border Patrolman."

A second film, "Poppy," starring W. C. Fields, will share honors. "Border Patrolman" introduces O'Brien as an officer entrusted with keeping law and order in the wide open spaces. He is called upon to reprimand a frivolous girl, Polly Ann Young, for violating fire laws by throwing lighted cigarettes in the brush. She refuses to accept a notice to appear in court and is taken by force. Because of her convincing manner and position of wealth, her defense in court makes a monkey of O'Brien. The latter quits the service. From then on things move fast and furiously.

In "Poppy," Fields is back in the noise and color of the carnival, hawking patent medicines and running a small shell game on the side. Rochelle Hudson takes the part of "Poppy," who appears as W. C. Fields' daughter. The two manage to take up a concession in the carnival which has moved into a small middle western town. Fields is going strong when he hears of an estate in the town which is waiting the appearance of its missing owner, a young girl. Without telling the girl, Rochelle Hudson, he manages a scheme to get her recognized as the heiress. Meanwhile Rochelle has fallen in love with Richard Cromwell, the son of the town's mayor. To tell the outcome of the story would spoil a night's enjoyment.

BOOK HOLIDAY TWIN BILL

For the Fourth of July holidays, Manager Lester J. Fountain has obtained an appealing program for the Fox West Coast theater in "The Last Outlaw," starring Harry Carey and Hoot Gibson, and "It's Love Again," with Jessie Matthews and Robert Young. Both are in a lively song and dance romance. The picture will open on Friday.

"The Last Outlaw" is a vigorous action-filled western drama pictured in the up-to-the-second setting of a modern manhunt. Supporting Carey and Gibson are Margaret Callahan, Henry B. Walthall and Tom Tyler.

The picture tells the adventures of an old western desperado who, 25 years after his last law-defying escapade, takes to his guns again to wipe out a mob of city gangsters.

One's weakness for singing, dancing and feminine beauty is answered competently in "It's Love Again." Jessie Matthews comes to town in a sprightly comedy. Her tap routines, ballroom dancing and finally her sensational new tempo dance achieve perfection. Robert Young brings vitality to the role of her leading man. Sonnie Hale (Miss Matthews' husband in off-screen life) is cast in a tailored-to-measure comedy role. The scenario deals with the exploits of an ambitious chorus girl who, refused stardom, achieves it by the round-about method of impersonating a sensational mystery woman from Asia whose exploits become the talk of millions and the subject of headlines.

Ginger Dances With Fred Again

Ginger Rogers, wearing her tricky cap, sings and dances again with Fred Astaire in "Follow the Fleet," which comes to Walker's State theater Sunday for an engagement of three days.

'FOLLOW THE FLEET' COMES TO WALKER'S ON SUNDAY

A double dose of top ranking movies is due to be presented Santa Ana Sunday when "Follow the Fleet" and "Paddy O'Day" arrive at Walker's State theater for an engagement of three days.

WEST COAST WHITE ANGEL FILMS 'SAN FRANCISCO' IS COMING JULY 5

One of the truly great pictures of the year is showing at the Fox West Coast theater. "San Francisco," with Clark Gable and Jeanette MacDonald, opened yesterday, and indications point to a record attendance before the close of the engagement.

"Changing of the Color Guard," one of the new Warner Bros. "Featurettes," filmed in technicolor, was booked by Manager Lester J. Fountain as the second picture on the bill. The cast is headed by the Sybil Jason with Sidney Bracey and Halliwell Hobbes in supporting roles.

"San Francisco" at its opening in Los Angeles on Thursday proved to be a sensation. Supporting Gable and Miss MacDonald in the film are Spencer Tracy, Jack Holt, Jessie Ralph and Ted Healy. "San Francisco" has a drama, love interest, comedy and spectacle. Gable has the rough and tough type of role in which his screen public likes him best. Miss MacDonald has the ideal part to give her opportunity to sing.

The story is that of the Barbary Coast of 30 years ago opening on New Year's eve, 1906, and continuing through one of the most disastrous dramas of the century, the San Francisco earthquake and fire.

Gable is the boss of one of the most popular resorts on the Barbary Coast. Miss MacDonald is the small town girl who wanders into his dance hall, filled with ambition to become a great singer. Beginning her career on the coast, she succeeds in rising to operatic heights, but returns to the coast to sing in tights for the man she loves.

Santa Ana High School Instructor Marries Texas Girl in Afternoon Rites

Vacationers Follow Breezes To Favorite Haunts

In the heat of the day come alluring wisps of breezes that hint of glorious playgrounds out in the sun where care may be thrown to the winds and where the only thoughts worth while are those of getting an ultra-ultra suntan and having a good time. And in pursuit of those breezes, Santa Anans and their families are thinking up excuses for the gayest of gay week-ends and vacations at the seashore, in the mountains, and in the county parks.

Following some of these vacationers around, we find:

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Smedley and daughter, Betty, the latter just home from Scripps college, making plans for a week's vacation at Forest Home, starting about July 7.

Mary Nau directing music in a camp down near San Diego.

Home from Mountains
Susana Alexander coming home this Sunday from a delightful vacation in the mountains.

The Guy Charles Hendersons and daughter, Dorothy Lee, and Miss Margaret Dimes are leaving tonight for a two-weeks' trip to Yosemite.

Mrs. J. D. Watkins of Balboa looking forward to the arrival of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Ehrler and daughter, Jean, from Cleveland, Ohio, for a visit with her at the beach and with friends in Los Angeles.

Summer in Colorado
Mrs. Reine Chew and children of 826 Orange avenue leaving yesterday for a summer near Colorado Springs with Mr. Chew's family.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Barker of Bush street driving to Kansas for a two-weeks' vacation.

Miss Marjorie Haster, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Haster of Garden Grove, flying east to take passage to Rotterdam, Holland, where she will visit relatives for six months.

Off to Australia
Miss Myrtle Martin of this city and Miss Alma Fend of Berkeley leaving for a summer tour of Australia and the South Seas.

Miss Elizabeth Renshaw, Anaheim, also planning a trip to Australia, leaving from San Francisco on July 1. These four made their plans through the Commercial National Bank travel bureau.

Monas Summers Smith and Miss Verna Ramsey of the Santa Ana library enrolling next Monday at U. C. L. A. for a six-weeks' course in librarianship. Miss Ramsey is the one who writes the interesting book reviews for the library, and Mrs. Smith has given many reviews before local clubs.

Former Residents Here
Mrs. George L. Wright of 831 Minter street entertaining as her guests her daughter and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Brainerd and Evelyn and Marian of Riverside, who are former residents of Santa Ana, just returned from a vacation at their Forest Home cabin, the Brainerds plan to make a visit of several days in the city.

Barbara Rowland, daughter of Mayor F. C. Rowland and Mrs. Rowland leaving today for the Girl Reserve Camp near Desano in the San Diego mountains, where she will be counselor of riding during the next few weeks.

Girl Reserves Home
Helen Tidball returning home from the Girl Reserve Camp Torquay on Catalina island, together with 85 other Girl Reserves from this region.

Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Ashland of 823 Cypress street planning a gala day tomorrow when they celebrate the birthday of Miss Marian Ashland and entertain Mrs. F. L. King and three daughters, Mary, Ruth, and Virginia, of Los Angeles, at dinner. Mrs. Ashland and daughters, Marian and Betty Lou, will spend next week in Los Angeles with the Kings.

Newport Harbor Yacht club has issued invitations for a series of parties on "the Fourth" week-end, starting with the first ladies' bridge luncheon on Friday, July 3.

A Fourth of July dinner dance Saturday evening will be the climax of the week-end, with dancing events scheduled for Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

MEXICO, BOLIVIA INDIAN WORK DESCRIBED
Imaginative trips to Mexico and Bolivia were made Thursday afternoon by members of the Calvary church missionary society, meeting in Berean hall.

Miss Evelyn Griset, recently returned from nearly a year with her aunt and uncle in missionary work among Mexican Indians, told of activities there. Miss Mina Sepler, missionary among Bolivian Indians for 13 years, spoke briefly.

Enodia and Esteri club girls, the Rev. Joseph Flacks and the Rev. F. E. Lindgren, pastor of the Calvary church, were guests at a pot-luck luncheon and afternoon meeting.

Mrs. Evelyn Reeves, member of the 1936 graduation class of the Los Angeles Bible institute, gave her graduation address and led song service. Mrs. E. K. Wyman directed the junior choir in several songs.

Mrs. John Sutherland conducted a short business meeting. Miss Irene Hunter served as program chairman, and Miss Bethel Bowers led devotionals.

GOING EAST

Niagara Falls is to be the home of Mrs. William Rees Mendenhall (Helen Bower), attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Bower of 1324 Bush street, who departed for the east with her new husband following her marriage last Saturday morning in Riverside. The new-laws are visiting the Mendenhall family home in Wichita, Kans., on their way.

RECENT BRIDE

Yuma, Ariz., was the marriage place of Mrs. Louise Basse, formerly Miss Janice Leonard of Garden Grove, who plighted her marriage vows at the Foursquare Gospel church in that city on May 29. On their return, the bride and groom settled in Long Beach, where they are now making their home.

GLAZE HOME IS SCENE OF LAST MEETING

Pleasant incidents of the past year were recalled Wednesday evening by past presidents of Calumet auxiliary, U. S. W. V., who were guests of Mrs. May Glaze, Garden Grove, at their final meeting of the season.

Gifts received during her term of office by Mrs. Glaze, past department president, were exhibited. Bridge was played, with first and second score awards going to Mrs. Nannie Reed and Mrs. Elva Hunt.

When supper was served, late in the evening, the hostess presented a cake to Mrs. Estelle Dresser, celebration of her birthday anniversary. Mrs. Dresser also received a gift from her "mystery sister."

Mrs. Celia Cook and Mrs. Helmer were announced as co-hostesses for the next meeting, to be held in September at the new Cook home, Orange.

Those present Wednesday were Mesdames Katherine Reagan, Emma K. Wassum, Elizabeth Erickson, Elva Hunt, Estelle Dresser, Eleanor Shaw, Edna Hannah, Bertha Helmer, Celia Cook, Nannie Reed, Bess Moberly, Bertha Dixon, Mr. and Mrs. Glaze and their son, Bobby.

THIMBLE CLUB SEWS FOR NEEDY
Native Daughters of the Golden West gathered in Thimble club session Thursday at the home of Mrs. Carl Schroeder at 2131 Lincoln avenue, spending a delightful day sewing for their contributions to welfare.

At 12:30 o'clock, Mrs. Schroeder served a delicious southern dinner to her guests, seating them at two long tables prettily centered with mixed summer flowers and spread with linen cloths.

Mrs. Mae West and Mrs. Muriel Bray, who with the Mesdames Marguerite Mize and Gertrude Etzold, were delegates to the recent convention in Stockton, gave reports of that meeting and also of their interesting visit to the Native Daughters home for the aged in San Francisco, showing pictures of the latter.

The afternoon was spent informally, and at the close the hostess invited her guests out into the yard where ice cold watermelon was served under the big walnut tree.

On July 11, the group will have a picnic at the home of Mrs. Pleasant at Rancho Santiago.

EBELL MEMBERS RETURN FROM CONVENTION
Mrs. F. C. Rowland of South McClay, president of Santa Paula Ebell club; Mrs. E. D. White of 2115 North Broadway; Mrs. Edith Cloyes of 622 South Van Ness, and Mrs. C. M. Deakins of Balboa Beach have just returned from the southern district summer conference of Ebells clubs, held in Del Mar on Wednesday and Thursday of this week.

Mrs. White is district chairman of Junior Ebells clubs, and Mrs. Deakins chairman of gardens for the district.

Mrs. Rowland took part in a panel discussion on the subject of "The Home" while at the convention, leader of the forum being Mrs. A. McEwen of Riverside.

Miss Beulah May Club Hostess

Miss Beulah May of 1002 Maybury street entertained her contract club Thursday afternoon at the Beta Sigma Phi cottage at Laguna Beach, the members gathering for a pot-luck luncheon which was served with lovely appointments before the card games.

Miss May had prepared unique score cards of sample ballots, with the decorative motif. Added scores at the close of the playing put the democrats 800 points ahead of the republicans, and the theme was the cause of much merriment.

Club members enjoying Miss May's hospitality were the Mesdames E. M. Neally, F. C. Rowland, B. H. Sharpless, J. E. Gowen, Loyal King, Maurice Enderly, and Lillian Pritchett, the last three substituting for Mrs. F. C. Burke, Mrs. W. Maxwell Burke, and Mrs. E. E. Keech, who were unable to be present.

Having in mind the family dinners and Sunday gatherings so popular at this season of the year, we asked especially for that famous recipe, which was for "Smothered Chicken with Rice and Vegetables," and Mrs. Lewis kindly consented to let us reprint it for our readers. Her method is as follows:

Dress, wash, and cut up two young chickens. Take one cupful of rice, partly cooked; six carrots split, six new potatoes or three old ones, cut in four pieces.

Put rice and vegetables between the pieces of chicken, season with salt and pepper, lay thin slice of salt pork on each piece of chicken. Add two cups of boiling water, cover closely and bake in a moderate slow oven one hour.

Ten minutes before taking up, remove cover, and add one pint of rich milk. Quicken fire, and a delicious, delicate chicken dinner is ready to serve.

To go with this, we chose one of her original recipes in the Santa Ana Ebells cookbook, in which she has a number of fine entries. This one was for "Almond Fruit Salad Supreme," which she makes as follows:

One pound cut marshmallows, three cups large white cherries cut in halves, 12 slices pineapple diced, two cups blanched almonds, cut fine, two firm cut bananas.

Put all into an earthen dish and mix with a mayonnaise dressing to which has been added a cup of whipped cream.

Toss lightly together and chill. Serve very cold on crisp lettuce with a generous supply of sweetened whipped cream and a white cherry; or, if color is desired, a red cherry.

Mrs. Lewis' closet of preserves is a pretty sight, each jar of jam, jelly, and canned fruit having its little lace paper cap tied with ribbon.

With all these interests, Mrs. Lewis finds time to take an active part in Ebells, the Laguna Art association, and other worthwhile organizations, and also to do some interesting writing in her leisure moments.

Cooking, to her, is an art just as much as her painting and her writing, and she believes in doing well anything that she does. Her philosophy of life includes the belief that simplicity is best in everything, and her achievements seem to bear out the truth of the idea.

COSMETOLOGISTS TO DINE MONDAY
Thomas McFadden, Anaheim, will be guest speaker Monday evening at monthly dinner meeting and program of the Orange county registered cosmetologists association, starting at 8 o'clock in the Green Cat cafe.

Mrs. Margaret Harris and Mrs. Verna Miller, Fullerton, will be in charge of the dinner. All cosmetologists of Orange county are invited to attend.

She can write, she can paint, she can cook, she can sew.

That's Mrs. Perry Lewis of Tustin, in whose delightful home we spent part of a morning this week while out in search of recipes and good cooking ideas.

And not only can she do all those things and many more, but she is among the best in those three fields in which she has won more than 400 prizes.

Mrs. Lewis has letters and prizes from most of the magazines in the country, her awards in a great variety of types of contests ranging in size from one dollar to a $1000 prize which she won for a magazine cover illustration and menu describing a Thanksgiving dinner.

Her first and chief interest was art, and she has won high honors in the National Art association, placing first in several nationwide exhibitions with her beautiful paintings; but in cooking also she has achieved high fame. One of her greatest victories in this field was the time she nosed out the chef of the Waldorf Astoria, winning second prize for her recipe and the noted New Yorker winning third.

Double Ring Ceremony Read at Glendale Church

Wee Kirk o' the Heather in Glendale formed a beautiful setting late yesterday for a double ring ceremony in which Miss Isabel Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. C. Smith of Houston, Texas, was united in marriage with Frank Val Jean McCoy of Santa Ana. Wearing a gown of white satin which fell from a halo cap, and carrying a bouquet of gardenias, Miss Smith was given in marriage by her father, and was attended by two of her Zeta Tau Alpha sorority sisters.

The Rev. O. Scott McFarland, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of this city, performed the impressive rites in the presence of about one hundred friends from Orange, Santa Ana, and Los Angeles counties, the ceremony taking place at 5 o'clock.

Miss Ruth Close of Beverly Hills, wearing a pink chiffon gown and carrying a bouquet of pink roses and delphinium, attended her as maid of honor; and Miss Mary Frances Allan of Los Angeles, in blue chiffon and carrying pink roses, was the bridesmaid.

John H. McCoy, assistant director of Santa Ana Junior college, attended his brother as best man; and James Ainley and Harold Yingling, Los Angeles college friends of the bridegroom, were ushers.

Departing after the wedding for a six-weeks' motor trip to Washington, D. C., the couple plan visits with relatives of Mr. McCoy in Ohio and with the bride's relatives in Oklahoma and Texas. Mrs. McCoy's going away outfit was a smart two-piece dress of powder blue crepe trimmed in navy.

On their return, they will make their home in Santa Ana, where Mr. McCoy is an instructor in the civics department of the high school.

The bride received her early education in San Jacinto High school, Houston, and then matriculated at the University of Southern California, from which she was graduated this spring.

She was a member of Zeta Tau Alpha sorority, which she served as president one year, and was also a member of the Trojan, Amateurs and Spooks and Spokes, and on the cabinet of the women's self-government association.

The bridegroom, who is the son of Frank L. McCoy of Salineville, Ohio, is a graduate of Orange Union High school, Santa Ana Junior college, and the University of Southern California, receiving his A. B. and M. A. degrees on the latter campus. He was a member of Phi Delta Kappa, national professional education fraternity.

Score awards for auction bridge were presented to Miss Gretchen Lieberman, Miss Geraldine Haupt, Mrs. George Bremer, Earl Halderman, J. P. Murphy and Carl Conner.

Hostesses were Mesdames Urban Engleman, Charles Borchard, Fred Dierker, William Maag, J. P. Murphy, H. Sackerson, Jack Oelke and Miss Geraldine Haupt.

Heading the refreshment committee was Mrs. Adella Robertson, assisted by Miss Angela Ohayrsobal, Carmela Italiano and Ella Mae Biere.

Plans for open installation ceremonies, preceded by a dinner at the Green Cat cafe, were made at Thursday evening meeting in K. of C. hall. July 9 was selected as the installation date.

Mrs. Clyde Ashen was named general chairman for arrangements. She will be assisted by Mesdames Urban Engleman, Walter Markel, Harry Lippitt, Ethelbert Johnson, Vincent Croal, Antone Borchard, F. Faulkner, E. F. Bruning, Misses Nellie Colombini, Mary Dierker, Margaret Young and Aline Colombini.

Mrs. Adella Robertson was initiated during business session conducted by Mrs. William Maag, Y. L. I. president. She urged a large attendance at annual grand convention, to be held in the Los Angeles Ambassador hotel, July 19 to 22.

Mrs. W. E. Patterson, assembly president, introduced the guest of honor and her associates. They included: Mrs. Walter Nye, Long Beach; Mrs. C. O. Metcalf, Los Angeles; Mrs. W. G. Lauderdale, Glendale; Mrs. Minor J. Hyde, San Diego; Mrs. Otto Miller, Hollywood, and Mrs. Frank Williams, Whittier.

Escort honors were accorded other supreme officers: Mrs. William McCuiston, chaplain; Mrs. Alfred Alfons, marshal; Mrs. Russell Pinkerton, assistant marshal; Mrs. Frank Whitman, inner guard; Mrs. Frank Sutton, courier; Mrs. Fred Gregg, historian; Mrs. B. Utley, committee woman on the supreme president's court.

Mrs. W. V. Whitson, first president of the Santa Ana assembly, presided during exemplification of ritualistic work. She adjourned the organization until September.

Mrs. Cood Adams of Tustin entertained a coterie of friends Thursday at her beach home at Balboa, the group enjoying a picnic luncheon and an informal day in the attractive summer home on the bay front.

Enjoying the day as Mrs. Adams' guests were Mrs. William Gaffon of Whittier, a niece of Mrs. Adams; Mrs. Henry Adams of Anaheim; Mrs. H. R. Smith of Orange; Mrs. Q. L. Hardy, Miss Anna Bowman, Mrs. Hugh Plumb, Mrs. Jessie Plumb, Mrs. Bruce Harding, Mrs. William F. Thompson, Mrs. John Lamb, and Mrs. Charles Adams.

Initiatory degree on drills will be presented by Alpha Theta Rode circle of Sycamore Rebekahs tonight in I. O. O. F. hall. A team of 40, from Los Angeles, will participate.

All Rebekahs and Odd Fellows are invited to attend the 6:30 o'clock pot-luck dinner preceding the closed meeting and drill display.

Four To Be Hostesses Tonight

To compliment the fiancée of a young Santa Ana man, whose wedding date has been set for July 17, Mrs. Effie Penman, Miss Minnie Penman, Mrs. Alfred Poulsen, and Mrs. Thomas Jessup, Jr., will preside as co-hostesses tonight at a pretty party and miscellaneous shower at the Penman ranch home near Tustin.

Honored guest is to be Miss Sonia Turney of Los Angeles, charming bride-elect of Alfred Poulsen, Jr., of Santa Ana and Los Angeles, son of one of the hostesses.

Gifts for the bride-to-be have been arranged in a decorated basket beneath a pink shower umbrella, and tables have been set for a delightful game called "On a Motor Tour."

At the close of the evening, refreshments will be served at the card tables, appointments bearing out a pink and white color motif and the ice cream being molded with small wedding bells in the center. Magnolia blossoms, white stock, and pink larkspur have been combined in bouquets through the house.

Among those gathering this evening to honor Miss Turney are the Mesdames L. Beeman, Rufus Bond, George Duke, and the Misses Ella Lillian, Edith, and Louise Gowen, all of Santa Ana; Mesdames A. H. Tyrrell, A. B. Lane, and Karl Kadau of Orange, and the Mesdames Harry Matthews, Hollis Lindsey, Dorothy Johnson, Tom Shedd, Floyd Hawkins, Ralph Stone, A. Shearman, Forrest Collar, and George Gaylord, and Miss Dorothy Penman, all of Tustin.

Mr. Poulsen, the bridegroom-elect, is well known here, having graduated from the local high school and junior college. He later was graduated from the University of Southern California and is now assistant manager of the McCann Manufacturing company in Los Angeles. He is the grandson of Mrs. Effie Penman.

Desserts To Balance Cold Meals

By JUDITH WILSON

Please your family and guests by serving a new and delicious dessert every day this week.

Desserts that are served warm make an ideal hot dish for a meal of cold dishes. Here are two to try during the next few days:

Apple Shortcake

Make a syrup by boiling together 1 cup each sugar and water and 1 slice lemon for 5 minutes. Add 6 apples that have been peeled, cored and cut into eighths. Cook until the apples are transparent and tender but still hold their shape. Make a very rich biscuit dough, using 2 cups flour, and divide in half. Roll out about 1-3 inch thick and place on a greased pie plate. Brush with melted butter and lay on the other half of the biscuit dough, rolled the same. Brush with butter and bake in a moderate oven until the shortcake is done. While hot, separate the layers, butter freely, fill with apples and top with more. Cover with a meringue, pressing some of the apples into the meringue as a garnish. Set into a hot oven until the meringue is lightly browned. Serve at once, with cream if you like it that way.

Lemon Snow

Soak 1 tablespoon gelatin in 1/4 cup cold water and dissolve in 1 cup boiling water. Add 1-3 cup sugar and stir until the sugar is dissolved, then add 1/4 cup lemon juice. Chill until the jelly starts to thicken. Beat the whites of 3 eggs until very stiff and whip the jelly into them. Beat until the mixture begins to stiffen and pour into a pudding mold that has been rinsed in cold water. Chill thoroughly. Serve with a chilled boiled custard sauce.

WINS PRAISE IN CLUB AUDITIONS

Miss Sally Mueller of 141 North Cambridge street, Orange, has won much praise for her coloratura soprano voice in recent auditions given for the consideration of clubs and schools who are making programs of talent for their 1936-37 seasons.

She was one of the featured artists at the first program audition of the Los Angeles district California Federation of Women's Clubs held Wednesday in Los Angeles, over which Mrs. Francis Eugene Payne presided. Earlier in the month, she was presented on the annual artists' program given by Mrs. Gertrude Purple Gorham at the Ambassador theater in Los Angeles, at which club and school representatives were present.

She appeared there in several groups of solos and also in ensemble numbers with Sylvia Ruderman, flutist; Harriet Gardner, cellist, and Richard Tetley-Kardos, pianist.

Thursday of this week, Miss Mueller was guest soloist at the banquet of the Los Angeles bar association, singing for five hundred guests who assembled in the foyer of Town and Gown at the U. S. C. campus.

Her accompanist has been Mr. Tetley-Kardos, who has been in concert work since he was 13 years of age and who has been on our two opera singers.

THEATER PARTY

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Smith of 324 South Ross street and Col. M. B. Wellington and Mrs. Wellington of Lemon Heights will attend the theater in Los Angeles tonight, planning to see Katherine Cornell in "St. Joan."

FILES SUIT FOR RADIO STOCK

Dorothy Lyman today started suit in the superior court here to recover from Ernest L. Spencer, manager of radio station KVOE, a one-third interest in the radio business which she asserted had been assigned to her by J. Frank Burke, former Santa Ana publisher, but later issued to Spencer.

Her complaint, prepared by Burke and Colwell, local law firm, alleges Burke was a third owner of the station prior to March 3, 1932, when it was incorporated as Voice of the Orange Empire, Ltd., and that at that time the entire stock of 300 shares at $100 each was issued in the name of J. S. Edwards.

Although Burke had previously assigned his interest to her, she alleged today, a certificate for one-third of the stock was issued to Spencer in 1934 on Burke's order. On Jan. 30, she charged further, Burke demanded that Spencer transfer the one-third interest to Burke or his order, but Spencer refused.

Vacation Cosmetics

By JACQUELINE HUNT

Those of you who are wise, know that summer and vacation time are created especially for making pretty girls prettier and more exciting and for bringing out unsuspected loveliness in girls who have always been considered plain.

Your skin seems to come alive and grows warm and rich hued on sun-kissed beaches. Your bodies become lithe and young and responsive while you rest and swim and play. You have a new sparkle in your eyes and even your personality becomes more pleasing.

If you expect to go to the seashore, use a sunburn preventative and over this pat a liquid powder. Use your regular rouge and lipstick and over the latter apply a film of cold cream or pomade. Dust with a little of your everyday complexion powder and you can be reasonably certain that you won't get more than a faint tan even after hours of exposure.

If you go to the plains or mountains, use a sunproof cream that is tinted to give you a sun-kissed look while it absorbs or reflects the sunlight. Dust on a little suntan powder and use only a hint of rouge. If your lips need more color, touch them lightly with your cheek rouge and then apply pomade liberally.

"How can I keep my hair nice in the summer? I love to swim and go bareheaded."

A little sun is good for your hair. It tones the scalp and is a splendid corrective for over-oiled hair. Since it does tend to dry out the natural oils, however, you should use brilliantine or a special oil to prevent split ends and roughness. If you swim in the surf, be sure to rinse all of the salt water out of your hair immediately after your swim, then dry with an absorbent towel and spray on some of the brilliantine.

Local History Told in Verse

(Believing that new interest will attach to early events in Orange county history through their presentation in verse, The Journal is publishing a series of poems by Robert Gardner of Orange, telling of these incidents.—Editor.)

CANYON OF THE OXEN (LOS BUYES)

Why hurry when the shade is all around?
Why let the dream of yesterday go by?

The oxen slowly moved along the road,
The cumbersome carreta creaked along.
The Indian boy was urging with a cord,
But still the pace was slow beneath the oak.

'Tis said the robbers buried treasures there,
And marked the spot with just an oxen yoke.
No doubt the outlaws used the wild retreat,
For surcease from their plunder and to rest.

The early Yorbas rode along that stream,
Another story says the oxen teams
Were lost or stolen but could not be found.
Then Yorba found them grazing in the shade,
Where grass was tall and spring water in the air.
And so he named the canyon after them.

The oxen and the dons have passed away,
But still the trees remain to shade the grass.

Story of the Bible Told in Pictures

The Israelites Safely Pass Through the Red Sea.—After the slaughter of the first born, Pharaoh told the children of Israel to depart from Egypt. Then commenced the wanderings of the children of Israel, who spent 40 years in the wilderness, before they reached the promised land of Canaan. And the Lord went before the Israelites by day in a pillar of cloud, and by night in a pillar of fire. Pharaoh's heart was hardened toward the Children of Israel after their departure and he took his army and pursued them. He instructed Moses to lift his rod and stretch his hand over the Red sea. And the waters of the Red sea parted and they went through on dry land. But when the Egyptians pursued them, Moses again stretched forth his hand. "And the waters returned, and covered the chariots, and the horsemen, and all the host of Pharaoh that came into the sea after them; there remained not so much as one of them."—Ex. 14:28. This illustration is from Merian's story of the Bible, engraved in 1625.

Her talk will be the third in a series of Independence day addresses.

During a prelude to the service, the Bear ensemble will play MacDowell's "To a Wild Rose" and Rameau's "Le Tambourin." Other numbers to be played are Grainger's "Country Gardens," the Welsh "All Through the Night," the Volga Boat song, Wagner's "Evening Star," Capua's "Maria Mori," and a medley of Scotch, Spanish and Mexican folk songs.

Roosevelt and Landon

NOW THAT the Democrats have jubilantly acclaimed F. D. R. and the Republicans have wholeheartedly lined up behind Landon, you can prepare for the inevitable partisan mud-slinging.

Wise voters, however, will not listen to it. They will look instead at the personal records of achievement and the ideals of the two men, and at the two platforms, and at the party records for honesty and accomplishment.

Choice between the two should bar all personalities and should be as cold-blooded as buying a piece of merchandise at a department store. Passion and prejudice should be laid aside. The only thing to be considered is the economic value of the item involved.

Some hysterical voters will see the approach of Fascism or revolution if one or the other is chosen president. Such visions will be seen on both sides, evening the score.

Roosevelt and Landon are just a couple of Americans. They probably agree that orange juice is good for breakfast. Each is the head of a family. Each goes to church. If they ever get together, they probably would find they were both worried when the first child got the measles.

There will be no physical change in the winner or loser. Get a load of Al Smith and Herb Hoover.

Believe what you wish. Say what you wish. Vote as you wish. But weigh in the two parties first—without listening to the mud-slinging—which is just an old political trick.

Fifty-five speakers lauded F. D. R. before the actual nominating speech, and 48 delegates seconded the nomination. That makes it almost unanimous.

Cutting the Traffic Toll

ON THE wreck-strewn Ridge Route between Los Angeles and Bakersfield, California Highway patrolmen have worked out a card index system for motorists which cuts down the traffic massacre.

Autoists who enter the dangerous 62-mile central stretch are stopped by officers who examine the cars for faulty brakes, lights, tires, rearview mirrors, signal devices and loads. The drivers themselves are observed for intoxication and checked for operating licenses. At the conclusion of the examination—during which they may receive warning or citations—they are given a card on which is marked the time they enter the stretch.

At the other end, the autoists hand this card to patrolmen stationed there who see if the elapsed time indicates that the legal speed limit of 45 miles an hour has been exceeded.

"It's just an experiment," says E. Raymond Cato, chief of the highway patrol, "but we've had splendid reports and it apparently is very effective. The average speed has slowed down 10 miles an hour, and only one minor accident occurred during the week."

We may be on the right track at last in the battle against Sudden Death. Periodical examinations of drivers and automobiles, plus a traffic check on dangerous stretches, may be the answer.

Fathers will play sons in a golf tournament at the Santa Ana country club. A lot of youngsters will get revenue now for those visits to the woodshed.

Chains on a Public Enemy

REVELATIONS of scandalous graft in the state liquor administration and the increase of open saloons are fast building up solid and widespread sentiment for a return to the bone-dry laws of the prohibition era.

Many people rightfully are upset at the present laxity in the sale of strong drink to any and all. Witness the 4500 signatures in Orange county to local option petitions. The signers recognize the truth of that old Japanese proverb: "A man takes a drink, then the drink takes a drink, and the next drink takes the man."

In regulating liquor to end present abuses, however, we must be careful not to play again into the hands of the criminal element which rode into power on the bootleg profits of the Volstead period. We should adopt a moderate, sensible program, such as that advocated by the California League of Municipalities.

The League would take the booze out of politics through a new non-partisan board, would make it possible for local communities to bar saloons and strong drink if they wished—while leaving the sale of beer and wine under control of the new state board.

Meanwhile, churches and schools should turn on full pressure in their educational expose of the way that alcohol degrades body and soul.

Local man has a magazine 30 years old. He probably found it in the waiting room of some doctor's office.

When the Sun Pours Down

OLD SOL bears down these days. His rays at noon can give a sunstroke or a sweat bath in 15 minutes.

During such weather, men and women are always a bit lazier—thanks to a wise provision of Providence. Otherwise they might exert too strenuously—sending temperatures and blood pressures shooting upward with disastrous reaction.

Keep up with your job during the scorching season. But don't worry, don't overdo, get plenty of sleep, and drink plenty of pure water. You'll live longer this way.

Self-restraint is what a man at a picnic has when he doesn't take a sandwich apart to see what's in it.

Whimsies of O. O. McIntyre

Along the water edges these starlit evenings are solitary figures wrapt in the bliss of self communion.

Completely lost in reverie. Water invariably inspires introspection and taciturnity. The silence of seamen is proverbial.

All my life I have lived near rivers. And the insularity of prairie towns fills me with forebodings.

The first airplane ride I ever took was to get out of a place that could not even boast a creek. And in those dips of despair to which we are heirs I am drawn to streams.

There is in the cluck and sag of the river or the wild beat of the surf something soothing, an intangible message that somewhere, somehow all is well. The Bible is packed with symbolism of the rivers and seas. Every human being, almost, returns from a sea siesta with renewed vigor. His thought changed.

Such fancies came to me last night in the bedroom of a broad-walk hotel in Atlantic City. Whither I had fled from the city's great heat. I did not sleep much. I never do in strange beds. But the message of the waves was there and I came back immeasurably refreshed.

Two New York artists have had their work of years vanish over their night recently. Leon Gordon's paintings were destroyed by fire and George Gray Barnard's sculptures by vandals. As one who creates in a snail's way, I can think of no greater discouragement. I have had two experiences of a week's supply of copy being lost in the mails in my some 20 years of writing. Each loss represents a black page in the business of living. But to have a lifetime of toil hopelessly spoiled is too frightful to contemplate. I'm certain I could never write another line, nor would I care to if I could.

I am an occasional visitor to a watchmaker on upper Broadway. A Joseph Conrad looking fellow with large head, bristling eyebrows and pointed beard. We have nothing particularly in common. If he has ever read my column, indeed if he knows my trade, he has never said so. He has never repaired a watch of mine. Years ago we fell into talk, during a jobless era, on one of the mall benches near his little shop. Whenever I passed I began dropping in. Our talk is of commonplaces. One of those passing ship friendships a large city so often fosters. Now and then I have a feeling I would like to see him and chat awhile and I always have a feeling he is rather glad to see me. He wears a horseshoe nail ring and, so he tells me, a night cap.

Painters as a rule have a simplicity in naming their canvases. An appeal that caption writers should study. In a loiter across West Fifty-seventh street today I saw one labeled "A Quiet Cedar in a Sunlit Street." And in Paris one time I saw a gem of eventide tagged simply "The Ferry." One of the most lifelike portraits I ever saw was in the National gallery in London. Of a French lady, it bore this title: "Portrait of Madame Moitessier." A touch of authentic genius in that. A glance and one instinctively wanted to know the name and nationality of the sitter. The caption told it.

The most inspirational touch of a newspaper caption writer was during the Lieutenant Charles Becker's gambling house pillaging. A picture of his magnificent home on the Grand Concourse was secured just in time to make an edition. The caption writer in a flash slapped over it: "The House That Graft Built."

Drum majoring is also among the vanishing glories. It passed out largely with the minstrel parade. Every minstrel incubated a fresh crop of club wringers in small towns. We made our club out of broomsticks silvered with tinfoil and capped with an old bed post knob. I was among three rather expert in performing a series of dazzling whizzes in our end of town. The other two were "Tough" Gillespie and "Shine" Bell. "Shine's" sobriquet came from his glistening ebony hue. Especially when he twinkled the sunlight after a high dive off the wharf boat. On Thursday band nights in the public square, a rousing Sousa march would inspire us to especial high strut. "Shine," as I recall, became so excellent he went out for a season as an olio act with a show boat.

The Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

PHILADELPHIA—Labor chiefs attending the convention warned high administrationites to be on guard against a series of strikes in major industries around Oct. 1, when the presidential campaign is in full stride. Union men claim that anti-administration forces are secretly planning to incite labor disturbances in an effort to undermine worker support of Roosevelt. Al Smith invoked the shades of Thomas Jefferson against the New Deal, but one of Jefferson's descendants was an enthusiastic Roosevelt delegate. He is Virginia Randolph Shackelford of Virginia, great-grandson of the first Democratic president.

Another delegate descendant of a famous man is Benton C. Fremont of California, whose great-grandfather was the first presidential candidate of the Republican party, in 1856. Philadelphia's snappy decorations in honor of the convention were designed by Herman Kosove—a staunch Republican.

GUM-CHEWING BINGE

J. Austin Latimer of Williston, S. C., who as deputy sergeant-at-law was in charge of policing the speakers' platform, made careful preparations to keep out gatecrashers. He memorized the faces and names of every member of the national committee. To fortify himself for the strain and excitement of the day, he had a daily ration of chewing gum from one to two packages. Jim says he got only about four hours' sleep a night during the week. The original draft of Sen. Alben Barkley's keynote speech ran one hour and 40 minutes. After much urging, the Kentuckian was persuaded to pare it down to a little over one hour.

"One-eye" Connelly was given a ticket for the convention, but that did not change the noted water-crafter's attitude toward ticket collectors. "Ticket collectors are a menace," he said. "I think it is high time the supreme court moved on those babies."

So great was the demand among delegates and visitors for copies of a Roosevelt-Garner cardboard campaign poster, distributed free by the national committee, that an additional 50,000 had to be rushed off the press. The Arizona delegation, 200 strong, displayed something new in the way of hatbands. Around their white sombreros they wore a two-inch band of burnished copper, chief mineral product of the state.

There was one Philadelphia business man who did not view the convention as a boost to his sales. The souvenir vendor at historic Independence hall, where the Declaration of Independence was signed, was downright skeptical about the political visitors. "Politicians," he said, "never spend their own money, and these delegates had to pay their own expenses."

ROOSEVELT TOUR

Farley told Pacific coast leaders on the 4. t. that the President will repeat his 1932 trans-continental campaign tour this year and visit their states early in the fall. An unsung hero of the convention was Edward F. McGrady, able, self-effacing assistant secretary of labor, who stayed off the front lines of the convention. The unionites, demanding increases in pay, threatened to walk out the morning the convention opened.

One Man's Opinion

By Duncan Ellsworth Clark

EDITOR'S NOTE—Here is an informative, analytical daily feature on current topics. The opinion expressed in this column are not necessarily the same as those held by The Journal.

More Service and Less Noise in Public Life

They will continue to do so as long as the people permit it. When we decide to elect men who have knowledge of economics, social conditions and historical trends, we hope for better things in political life may be expected.

The backward look is necessary to evaluate long-range movements. American independence was in preparation throughout the whole colonial period. The struggle for political equity covered a century. The great victory for educational opportunity has been a national issue from the earliest times. The demand for social justice and economic security rises to new heights after many years of struggle. These are some of the ways in which the American people have moved toward the "more abundant life."

The old histories overlooked many of the real values. They missed much of the significance in the onward sweep across the continent; of the gradual disappearance of the frontier; of the transformation of American life in the machine age; of the heroic founding of the Spanish missions with all their civilizing and Christianizing influences; of the devoted hosts of missionaries and teachers who have pointed the way to light and life. A careless world too often forgets them, or in the rush and racket of the years, utterly neglects them.

The people justly complain that politicians run the public business.

The People

This department belongs to The People. Letters to the editor on various subjects are welcomed and will be published, provided they do not contain abusive and personal references. Their publication does not necessarily imply the opinions they express are shared by The Journal. Letters must be signed, although signatures will be omitted upon request.

OLD TIMES LIVE AGAIN

To the Editor: Old-timers appreciate and enjoy every line published in The Journal which has any mention of early Los Angeles-Orange county history. Think I have read every historical writeup printed in the paper's columns and am surprised to find so few mistakes in them. Only one or two bobbles.

One was the tale written by some correspondent about a street car line connecting Santa Ana with the town of Fairview during the middle eighties. The error was corrected by Mr. Bradshaw of The Journal staff a few days later.

The line was a narrow gauge steam railway. Colonel Clark and a few associates lost a good sized fortune in the enterprise and collapse of the 1886 Fairview boom. Fairview was quite a pretentious town in those early days. It boasted a newspaper, published by E. S. Wallace. Wallace later was Orange county correspondent for the Los Angeles Times for a number of years and also ran a book store in Santa Ana. But what we were most interested in in those days was the Fairview baseball club, at that time one of the best in the country. Ed Lee, now an orange grower in the El Modena district, was a member of it. Moyer, afterwards a real estate dealer in Santa Ana, and Hawks were outfielders; a little Virginian named Henderson, a merchant at Fairview, was their pitcher. Henderson's brother was second baseman and Sam Dungan was another player on the team.

Dungan went from Fairview to the Oakland, Calif. club and later graduated from the cost team to the majors—played with Detroit, Chicago and Washington and during his day was known as a home run hitter.

The Fairview team played a number of games with Orange and Santa Ana clubs, as well as at other nearby places and if my memory serves me right, won the majority of them.

Col. Clark, founder of the town of Fairview was accidentally killed about 10 years later, when a horse he was riding fell with him.

Miss Louise Clark, the colonel's daughter, was a teacher in the Santa Ana schools during the late nineties.

JOHN B. JOPLIN, Anaheim.

WANTS DAM FACTS

To the Editor: It is important that the public be informed as to the exact amount the land and rights of way will cost in the Orange county flood control project now being discussed. I have several friends who say they will be against a bond issue for any amount unless the supervisors ascertain and publish in advance the actual expense which it will mean to the taxpayers.

The public is entitled to know what it is spending on this work. The supervisors should obtain and release as soon as possible the costs of the land to be occupied by the dams, the lakes, pipelines, railroad, the moving of the highway and other factors involved.

DAN MCKEETH, Santa Ana.

BRIGHT MOMENTS

Sir Robert Walpole, the eminent English statesman, had retired to private life and the cares of public business were far behind. One day he asked his son to get a book and read to him. "Should it be history?" his son asked. "No!" shouted the old statesman, "not history there can be no truth in that!"

Skinny Skribbles

Around and About Town

With C. F. SKRIBIN

Phil Stanton, veteran Republican, received a rousing welcome Thursday night when he unexpectedly appeared at the meeting held in the American Legion hall to open the Orange county campaign. Phil has been fighting the enemies of health for 14 months. He said it had taught him that if you expected to win you had to fight, and he applied the same rule to his politics. You see he ought to know something about it as he has put in 50 years in California politics. He is now a member of the state highway commission, and at one time speaker of the assembly. It was a real delight to his many party acquaintances to meet him again.

Meet a lot of fellows this hot weather who will tell you it's hotter than hell. How do they know?

Nels Edwards of Orange failed to arrive in time for the Republican meeting but he sent a card from Lake Louise, which made most of the audience wish they were with him. Edwards is on his way home from the Cleveland convention. On the way he picked up a new car which he is driving home. Evidently the senator is optimistic about the political chances of his party.

Notice one of the political slogans reads: "Farewell to Alms."

"Dollar day" in Santa Ana was not confined to last Thursday. Your dollar will be accepted any day during the week. We have an obliging bunch of business men who will take your dollar when you want to spend it, and give you full value for it.

Advertisement: "It's canning time." That's what the brewers thought. You can get it in cans now.

This complaint may not come within the city ordinances, but it is common just the same. Party comes in to tell me he likes rainy weather. He doesn't like 'em after he has retired for the night. At that point, he says, he doesn't give a tinker's d— whether Kate Smith gets the moon over the mountains, whether it's springtime in the Rockies or the Alleghenies, whether the Danube is blue or gray, or what brand of coffee you prefer. He wants to sleep and doesn't need any crooner to help him. What he wants is silence, and he can't get it.

Those fellows who have expressed their pleasure over the closing of both major political conventions seem to forget that the campaign has started. From now on the partisan temperature is likely to rise. So watch your pulse and keep as cool as you can under the circumstances.

Notice a young fellow pedaling a tricycle with an ice box in front.

Occasionally a fellow who is to call your attention to the fact that he has something to sell which, during these torrid times is popular merchandise—ice cream. He'll stop for you on signal, or if you run your automobile into his machine.

Many of the vacationists who are either going or returning report they are doing the larger part of their driving during the night, and loitering in the shade in the daytime.

Fem friend seeks my opinion as to the advisability of wearing shorts. It may be an innovation for her but I've been wearing 'em ever since the depression, and they have steadily grown shorter. With winter coming on either the WPA or Townsend has got to rescue me from what is becoming an embarrassing situation.

I'd go to the beach and take a swim but if I got into trouble I'd afraid the life guard might not find me. After due deliberation the bathtub is much safer, and I don't need so much water anyway.

One of the citrus publications in a recent issue questions the wisdom of shipping "serious" wind scars, or puffy, ridgy fruit, and predicts that to do so will not bring "repeat orders." Maybe not, maybe not. But when a grower has fruit to ship, and the value has been depreciated through acts beyond his control, he's likely to insist on the packing house shipping it. In cases like the one under comment, the packing house won't suffer much. Shipment of only high-class fruit will bring a better price, but the high grade fruit will sell any time, and what the grower wants is to dispose of, at a profit if possible, other grades, or fruit which doesn't look so good from the outside, but is just as good on the inside. There isn't a surplus of fruit this year, anyway. So let's get the grower everything that is possible. He's the fellow who takes the rap all the way along the line, from the time he puts his money into a grove until the last orange is picked.

MOTHERS OF THE WORLD

THE HAWAIIAN

a series by Irving Sinclair

UNDER the turquoise blue of the soft sky, the Hawaiian Mother is the most picturesque and charming in the vast western Pacific, a delightful amber-hued girl, who wears her "best" for every day, whether it be a holoku or the more festive and decorative leis of flowers and maile. In true Hawaiian villages, she and her children live in the open, under palms and mangoes, close to the tropic beaches where breakers show white foam in the early dusk. Faintly, though close at hand, comes the rhythmic pounding of poi. Her duties are a pleasant part of her leisurely days, tending the taro patches, helping occasionally with the fishnets, watching the men drive out through the surf in outrigger canoes, and, when the sun drops low, bathing in the warm lagoons. Beneath a garden wall overhung with night-blooming cereus, her rich voice accompanies the strumming of ukulele or guitar, in gentle minor tones singing the sadness and joy of "Aloha oe" and the other epic songs of her race, crooning to her child tales of past glory handed down from mothers to sons and daughters for thousands of years.

Castaways Set Sail for Marquesas in Tiny Craft

Three Crew Members, Fearing Ill Omen, Refuse To Sail On Venturesome Voyage

Looking Backward

Captain Josiah Knowles, en route from San Francisco to South America on his fine new clipper ship, the "Wild Wave," is wrecked on Oeno Island in the South Pacific, a desolate, uninhabited coral atoll. Hoping to reach Pitcairn Island and get help for his crew and passengers, Captain Knowles and a few of his men salvage a lifeboat from the wreck and, rigging a sail, embark on a voyage across the 80-mile stretch of sea to Pitcairn. Arriving there, they find the island deserted. The buildings, however, are intact, and, finding tools, they plan to build a more sturdy craft and try to reach Tahiti. Now go on with the story.

By James L. de Pauli

Chapter 3

"Grave fears for my passengers and crew assail me."

TIME and again entries in Captain Josiah Knowles' diary show the fineness of his character. His anxiety was always for his fellow castaways, selfishness never for a moment, despite the great mental and physical strain he was laboring under, coming to the fore, proving no such base emotion existed in his staunch soul.

Captain Knowles' own entries thus graphically tell of the days that followed.

"April 26—The boat from Oeno reef has not arrived up to this date. I very much fear that the boat and occupants have met with disaster, supposing of course, that the second mate, in compliance with my instructions sent by sea-bird post, has left Oeno for this island. Their non-arrival gives me great anxiety. Part of the day engaged on the boat, but, rheumatism having attacked me, I was obliged to stop work and remain at home. This complaint has troubled me a good deal, and I fear it will disable me before we can get away.

"April 27—Today a veteran hog endowed with some evil power met his death after a long and severe struggle. Some of the party, who were out hunting with our improved gun, saw the savage animal on a hillside, where, owing to rain, the ground was soft and slippery. Heretofore, whenever we met him he charged upon us furiously, and we lost no time in climbing the nearest tree. This day, however, his situation was almost one of helplessness, as he waded about half embedded in mud and clay. One of the men was able to get near enough to shoot the creature just as he had his mouth open and was ready for a charge upon us. After quite a battle he gave up, being almost riddled with bullets. He was a monstrous fellow, with tusks several inches long. We brought him home in triumph and, besides being a welcome addition to our larder, we experienced a strange exhilaration at his downfall. I actually believe our continued efforts to slay the beast did much to keep the strained minds of my men occupied.

"APRIL 29—Finished our planks today and laid them in the sun to dry. In the afternoon laid the keel of our boat and began to set her up, though with great inconvenience from the want of tools. We hadn't even a single saw, and had to use an axe instead, thus wasting much lumber and taking much valuable time.

"May 5—The frame of the boat being up, we set about planking her, and did a long day's work. In the evening picked oakum, having on hand scraps of rope picked up here and there. Large pieces were unlaid and made into yarns with which to make rigging for the boat now building.

"May 7—Making sails today from rags or every hue and fabric that we could find—cotton, wool, silk or linen, from heavy canvass to the thinnest sheeting.

"May 12—On a general hunt for nails, or anything of metal that could be made into fastenings for the boat. We even burned houses to get nails, but hardly got enough then. I was reluctant to permit this, but the plight of myself and those dependent upon me justified this vandalism.

"May 14—Today we used up the last of our boards, and were obliged to set at work to hew out some. This, by the way, is a long and laborious process. We must take a log and hew it down to the thickness of one and a quarter inches. Our only tools to do this work are axes, but luckily we have planes to smooth the plank. Every day some one of us gathers a quantity of green coconuts, the milk of which is almost the only thing we have to drink, having no storage tank to catch the frequent showers.

"May 26—My twenty-eighth birthday. On my last I little expected to be situated as I am today. I hope sincerely on my next birthday to be at home with my family and friends, who, by this time, I suppose have given up all idea of ever hearing from me again.

"MAY 27—Reluctantly set fire to another house today to obtain nails for our boat. The man who started the fire went off and left it in flames. After a time we noticed heavy smoke pouring over the hills, and on going over to the house found that not only one, but four houses had been destroyed. Worst of all, in one of them was a quantity of clothing and other necessities which we could ill afford to lose. In reprimanding the man for his carelessness, he chose to challenge my authority, and I of necessity had to resort to physical force to maintain discipline. I fear long strain and discomfort are proving a wearing force on the minds of our party.

"June 4—Our boat today was finished. That is, her hull. Our spars are not yet made and we have some caulking to do, but the hull we can say is done, as far as woodwork goes. She is thirty feet long, four deep, has an eight-foot beam, and a cabin. Part of the sails are made from old canvas from the Wild Wave, and the remainder, of old rags of every sort found on the island. She carries three sails and is schooner-rigged. We have made forty-five fathoms of rope from available material on the islands.

"June 17—Nearly ready for sea. Boat must be caulked with pitch again as being made of green wood she shrunk. We have now only to rig our spars, and bend on sails, to be ready for our long voyage. Used the flag-staff for our mast. Made our ensign from hunting found about the church pulpit, pieces of blue dungaree and odds and ends. Our flag has twelve stars and nine stripes. Plan to make a small skull to be used as a tender to our boat.

"July 9—Spent last three weeks making final preparations. Made soundings in the channel with small boat, preparatory to launching. Jammed my hand very severely at that task in moving large rocks, but was greatly relieved by the application of Perry Davis' pain-killer, which I found on the island. After hard day's work we launched the boat. As she stove slightly in turning her, three of the men, regarding this as a bad omen, declined to go to sea in her. I made no objections, reflecting the plight of those on Oeno reef was my first consideration and the less in our boat the greater our chances of reaching aid.

"JULY 17—Strong winds from the southeast. It is very trying to wait on the weather. Now that we are ready to go. In the afternoon we carried twelve hundred oranges aboard, also our stove, which is made from a kettle that looks like it had been used as a still. Christened our boat the John Adams, after one of the original settlers of Pitcairn Island.

"July 19—Found the boat on her beam ends the heavy surf having washed away the shore. Wrote several letters, intending to leave them on the island, giving an account of our adventures, etc. These will serve as a record in the event that our voyage meets with disaster. Have a strange sense of gratitude for settlers of this island, knowing even the scant material we found here enabled us to attempt this escape. Should fortune favor me and I continue my sea career, I should like nothing better than to visit the former residents of this island in their new home at Norfolk Island.

"July 23—Bid good-bye with singular emotion and left Pitcairn. At 12 o'clock, with the sea quiet, we launched the boat without mishap or disaster, and anchored her off shore. Our anchor was an old anvil. Mr. Bartlett and I went ashore and dug up my money, which had been all this time directly under the boat while building. This caused considerable surprise, as I could discern. Soon after noon we weighed anchor and started out to sea, being accompanied a mile or two by the men who proposed remaining on the island. This caused me surprise, as they had hardly spoken in the last few days, and I not wishing to make unnecessary trouble or seeing reason to call them to task about their unfriendliness allowed them an easy berth. They left us with three cheers that seemed to me strained and peculiar and without other words rowed back toward the island in their outrigger canoe. I pray they will not come to harm. I put down my misgivings about leaving them there to the Lord knows what fate thinking of the others in my charge. My intention was to steer to Tahiti, but the wind being against us, I am pointing our bow toward the Marquesas which, according to my memory, should be Northeast. Mr. Bartlett, myself and crew very seasick and had our boat swamped during the night, would have been great effort to save ourselves. Providence took pity, however."

HERE again we turn the searchlight of deduction on the diary of Captain Knowles. After the philosophical entry "Providence took pity, however," his diary becomes little more than a log. But it is from those entries written on the tossing John Adams and from affidavits and letters that we are able to reconstruct the voyage of the little boat and her desperate crew of four. That voyage, though ranking as one of the most remarkable in seafaring history, has been so well described in the reminiscences of Captain Knowles that the reconstruction becomes something much more than fiction.

Reminiscences Of A Rover

"SANDAKAN'S LADY" » » » » » By Whit Wellman

LAWRENCE BELDEN shivered under six blankets on the split palm floor of Tek's only dwelling. His face was wasted and gaunt from this latest bout with malaria; his eyes were closed.

Sikh Gobin Lal stared down at him from the hut's entrance with a knowing grin.

"Bantak sasa—much trouble, Tuan!"

"Quinine," Belden muttered.

Padding footsteps came toward the stairs. A native girl in an orange sarong brushed past Gobin Lal and knelt beside Belden.

"Si Mijar —" the sick man murmured, opening his eyes. He glared dully at her in distaste. Because of her youth and exotic appeal he had fled to Tek's, last outpost between Sandakan and unexplored jungle. He had no desire to look at her, and turned on his side.

"Get out," he said.

"You've no business up here."

In Borneo on a surveying job for a rubber syndicate, he had allowed Si Mijar to sit on his veranda; she was amusing, pretty, and she worshipped him. Sandakan gave it no second thought, but pursued the eastern custom of minding its own business. It had come out finally, after Belden had investigated rumors, that Sir James Hubert had paid the girl to be seen with him — which was understandable, since Sir James had determined to marry Helen Harrison, Sandakan's Lady — some said, Sandakan's only lady! — to whom Belden was engaged. Sir James' insinuations, exaggerated rumors, and what a jealous girl might believe evidence, had ended in a scene. Helen might get over it, given time; meanwhile he had taken himself out of the way. Women cooled more quickly when a man was elsewhere.

"Tuan!" Gobin Lal advised, "Let us throw this person to the jungle. His lordship, the tiger, will welcome her."

"Diam!" flashed the girl. "Be quiet!"

"Go to the kampong down the river," Belden said. "When the flood goes down, a Dyak will take you to the city."

"Sir Jim sent me," protested Si Mijar. "He said you need me, and since he is marrying himself to Sandakan's Lady—"

"What?" Belden rose on one arm.

"Yes, tuan. He marries her at once."

"She lies," Gobin Lal observed.

"We're going to Sandakan to stop that wedding!" Belden grunted. "Get blankets, matches, and my gun—"

"Rice," said Gobin Lal.

BELDEN staggered to his feet, lurched into the sunshine. Without Lal he was helpless, but with great luck they might make the terrible journey through flood and jungle. Two courses were open: to remain in Tek's, or try for the coast through swamp and forest. Malaria shook him, yet with luck—

Gobin Lal came out, a pouch of rice at his belt. Belden tuan, the Sikh said, was like his own father and mother. Allah alone was more wise and brave. Where the master went, there went Gobin Lal! Nevertheless, without much good fortune they would soon be mati, dead.

"Layu, as a leaf falls," the Sikh said. "We are leaves, tuan. My children are my seeds, but the tuan has no seeds. It is well we go to Sandakan."

Si Mijar, drooping, sullen, was sent to the nearby kampong to await the end of the flood. She stared at Belden a long time, then decided her case was hopeless, and stepped gingerly down the muddy trail.

In the heat of each day, Belden and Gobin Lal rested. Traveling was done at night, circling through rotting mangrove swamps — wading knee-deep in slime with leeches clinging to boots and clothes.

The second day, Belden was so weak that Gobin Lal insisted on a rest. The Sikh's dark face grew drawn. Their rice gave out, and Belden's lips were a thin line of despair as they crawled over the last low range of hills. Below them stretched the blurred coast, Sandakan — and somewhere in it, preparing for a wedding, Sandakan's Lady.

White houses gleamed through the early mist. Gobin Lal lifted Belden on his shoulder and carried him down the final steep ravine. That afternoon they waded down the main avenue, supporting each other like drunken men.

At Sir James' house they paused. Belden dropped to the steps, and Gobin Lal pounded on the door with his rifle.

A bronzed English face peered out. The features twisted in a forced grimace.

"Question," Belden mumbled. "It's true — you're marryin' Helen?"

"This evening at nine o'clock," Sir James said harshly.

At the moment it seemed like a good idea to Lawrence Belden to kill Sir James, but he wasn't strong enough. Instead, he went to a native drink shop with Gobin Lal, scratched two lines on a card, and asked the Sikh to deliver it.

Within a few moments he returned with the crumpled message.

"It is ajal, tuan. Destiny. Her servant says the foolish lady will read no writings."

Belden drew himself up. No woman was worth what they'd gone through: five days in a jungle, dying by inches. He muttered aloud to himself. Gobin Lal gave him a drink of native tuak, a colorless brandy. Belden's world began to change as the bitter liquid slipped down his parched throat.

GOBIN LAL, with a knowing grin, led him to the street. They walked for what seemed hours, and came to a little house on the edge of town.

Gobin Lal pushed the bell. The door opened, and a maid in apron and cap questioned him suspiciously. The Sikh's beard was matted, his clothes ragged. Belden's sunken cheeks were covered by a week's stubble.

"For tea, we came for tea," Belden said loudly.

The maid ran up the stairs; they heard words through thin rattan partitions.

"I'll not see him!" Helen's angry voice came down. A foot stamped in anger, a door slammed. The maid gave Belden a note, which he held in unsteady hands.

"—It will do no good. Your actions are unpardonable, and I will not see you."

Gobin Lal scowled and went to the door. The maid said insolently, "What name shall I say?"

"Name?" the Sikh scoffed. "The tuan besar Belden, great lord come through flood and famine to see a foolish woman!"

The maid gasped. Her eyes went wide in amazement.

"It's all right, my lady!" she cried. "Come down, come down! It's him we've been waiting for! It's him!"

At the top of the stairs Sandakan's Lady began to sob—then to laugh. She rushed down the steps. "You fool, you dear fool!"

Sixty Seconds From Life

MORNING mists tinged with rainbow-shot beams from a diffused sun, as yet only half above the horizon, brought a sudden coolness into the room where a haggard young officer in a badly wrinkled white uniform paced back and forth, his lips tightly drawn and the weariness of a sleepless night in his eyes. He shivered. His uniform jacket was open at the throat, his white shoes were flecked with cigarette ash, and gold-braided epaulettes hung with an air of dejection from limp shoulders. At intervals he ran none too steady fingers nervously through his hair. Lieutenant Paul Daniels had had a decidedly miserable night. He was making a momentous decision, something that would change the entire course of his life, possibly his whole career. He was in love with Jane Carter, Major Carter's niece. Jane Carter loved him, too—wanted him to divorce his wife and marry her, and that was what he wanted to do—what he must do—but Helen would be difficult. She was so madly in love with him, she might refuse to give him up, even though his love belonged to another. Women were like that, especially Helen! He would have to be kind but firm. All night, over and over, he had rehearsed what he would say to her, and now, as the bright Hawaiian sunshine tinged lazy fleecy clouds over the Army Post with the pink and gold of a new day, he was still undecided just how to break the news. A sudden tingling of the telephone caused him to start. He strode swiftly across the room and took down the receiver, listening for a moment to see if Helen had answered from the connection at her bedside in the next room. She had not.

"Hello," he whispered.

"Hello, Paul?" came a soft feminine voice.

"Yes."

"You haven't been to bed?"

"No, darling."

"Neither have I. I couldn't think of sleep. Have you told Helen?"

"Not yet. I've been trying to think of a way to appeal to her. I'm afraid, Jane. She's very much in love with me. She'll never consent to divorcing me."

"But she must. You don't love her, Paul. Surely, she wouldn't want that way. We belong to each other. Better one person is unhappy than three."

"I know, my sweet, but she won't see it that way. When a woman is as much in love with her husband as Helen is with me, there's no reasoning with her. I'll have to appeal to her spiritual self—the finer, sportsmanship side. It's the only way. I've been thinking for hours on end how to approach her."

"Let me know the moment it's over. I'll be miserable until I know."

"Immediately, darling."

"Good-bye."

"Good-bye."

LIEUTENANT DANIELS placed the receiver back on the hook. With a grim determination mirrored on his face, he rose and started toward his wife's room. This feeling that gripped him now must be like the zero hour in battle when the terrible moment arrives to charge the enemy. He had heard the older officers describe it, and some of the enlisted men. Lieutenant Daniels had never been to war.

Softly he opened the door of his wife's room and tip-toed over to her bed. He looked at Helen as she slept—serene, untroubled. How sorry he was for her! She was a good wife, a fine woman, and she adored him. But he didn't love her! Life was like that! It was just something that couldn't be helped. He hoped she wouldn't become hysterical or do something rash. Suicide ran through his mind. That would be terrible! She might drive her car off the Pal or drown herself in the surf! He would have to be very considerate, but—he must be firm. He must have a divorce! Trembling a little, he put his hand on her arm and shook her gently.

"Helen."

Helen opened her eyes, looked at her husband and then closed them again.

"Helen," he repeated. "Wake up. I have something to tell you."

Again she opened her eyes. Regarding him through sleepy lids, she laughed.

"Why, Paul, you look terrible! Where have you been? What in the world have you been doing?"

"Helen, I've been awake all night. I've been thinking. It's important—terribly important. I don't want to hurt you—in fact that's what's been driving me frantic, but—"

"But what, Paul?" Helen interrupted, sitting up in bed, now fully awake.

"Helen, you've always been a good sport, and it's to your good sportsmanship that I'm appealing now. I know I mean a great deal to you, and I'm fond of you, too, but, well, it's not love."

"Paul! You're in love with someone else!"

"Now, Helen, don't take it too hard. It's just one of those things in life that can't be helped. Something we can't control. There's just nothing we can do about it. We—"

"And you want your freedom?"

"We can arrange it anyway you like, Helen. I—"

"Oh, Paul! I can't believe what you're saying is true! It's that Carter girl! She has stolen you from me! How can I ever face her here at the Post? And our friends! We'll be running into each other at every turn in Honolulu! I can't bear to think of it!"

"But I thought you'd go back to the mainland. I—surely, you—"

"I love the islands, Paul. I think I shall stay here always."

"Well, if you feel that way, Helen, I can easily get transferred. I'll see the Colonel and ask him to put through a recommendation to Washington for my immediate transfer."

"I can't believe it's true, Paul! It can't be possible, our marriage—everything—to end like this!"

"It's Fate, Helen. Please don't take it so hard."

"I'll try not to, Paul."

Helen buried her face in her pillow. From its folds her muffled voice came to him. "Please go quickly, while I can still bear up."

"Then you'll divorce me?" With difficulty Paul kept elation out of his voice. Immediately he was ashamed of himself. Helen must be suffering untold mental agony.

"I want you to be happy, Paul," came the scarcely audible reply. He thought he caught a restrained sob in her voice. She was trying to be brave!

"That's sporting of you, Helen. I'll make all necessary arrangements." He hesitated by the bedside a moment, extended a hand toward the head buried in the pillow, then drew it back, and with a military click of his heels, did a right about face and walked swiftly out of the room.

MINUTES passed before Helen moved. Then, slowly she turned, sat up in bed and reached for the telephone at her bedside. She dialed a number.

"General Headquarters, Colonel Haley's orderly speaking," came the voice from the other end.

"I wish to speak with Colonel Haley."

"Colonel Haley is still asleep, ma'am. Shall I waken him?"

"Please, at once."

"Yes, ma'am." There was a pause, then a booming voice came to Helen over the wire.

"Hello, Haley speaking."

"Foster, darling, it's happened!" elation was bubbling in Helen's voice. "Paul has asked me to divorce him. He wants to marry Jane Carter, and he's requesting an immediate transfer back to the mainland. He's going to see you about it this morning! Isn't it wonderful?"

"Looks like he's solved our problem for us, my dear. I'll see that he gets the fastest transfer on record. And, by the way, honey, when will you marry me?"

"The moment I get my divorce. Call me later, sweet. I think I hear Paul in the other room."

"Right, angel."

Two receivers clicked back on their hooks as reveille sounded and life at the Army Post began.

Weird Magic Stunts Are Pure Trickery—Wizardo

Magician Claims All Wizardry Is Work Of Human Hands; Occult Powers Are Scouted

MAGIC is the oldest art in the world, as intensely interesting today as it was in Egypt when the first known magician, Tehatcha-emankh, gave a performance in the year 3766 B.C.

Magic or wizardry in a wide variety of forms has been practiced since the dawn of civilization — "black magic," mysticism, hypnotism, spiritualism, and the "white magic" which entertained the Pharaohs. A record of that original show can be seen today in the British Museum, preserved in the "Westcar papyrus" which when deciphered proved to be an account of the tricks performed by Egypt's master of magic, King Khufu, who ordered the performance, pronounced the clever man the "most wonderful magician in all the world!" The papyrus reads, "He knoweth how to make a lion follow him as if led by a rope; he knoweth how to bind on a head which hath been cut off—"

In the footsteps of "white magic" practitioners of the ancient and modern world, from Cagliostro to Houdini, comes Wizardo, an exponent of modern magic which has mystified magicians themselves. He landed recently in San Francisco from a trip around the world where he visited 23 countries and added to his store of secrets by studying the methods of Hindu fakirs, Tibetan mystics, and Oriental wizards who specialize in the "rope trick" and the "vanishing trick," and whose secrets are known to few men.

At his studio Wizardo has given private performances for newspaper reporters, magicians who are always ready to learn something new, and skeptics determined upon "finding him out."

One reporter asked for a card trick, and Wizardo obliged.

"Mention any card you like," he said. "Then go to the telephone and ring any number you wish."

The reporter did so—and the voice which answered the telephone told him his card was the ace of spades!

"Right!" the reporter admitted, "but how do you do it?"

Wizardo explained that the solution was as

Mind Reading and Other Forms of Seeming Occultism are Merely Part of the "Bag of Tricks," Known to Every Magician, Says Wizardo.

In the Streets of Bombay, Wizardo Watching Hindu Fakirs Practice Their Ancient Art of Charming the Deadly Cobra With Music.

Wizardo Levitating a Young Woman Assistant in One of His Mystifying Stage Tricks.

simple as switching on an electric light, but smilingly added—"A magician never tells."

"Magicians no longer claim unnatural powers from an 'outer world,' and the marvels of the ancients seem like child's play today. It's still the same 'white magic' that Cagliostro practiced when he amazed the courts of Europe in the time of Marie Antoinette. About the only difference is in the 'properties' used in modern exhibitions."

WIZARDO vanished through a sliding panel, and a moment later returned in the same fashion, smiling at the effect on his friends.

"We have more things to work with," he said, "and it is easier for us than it was for Cagliostro, although he was in many respects a genius. That Italian mountebank began his career in a gypsy wagon, and before he died in a cell of the Inquisition he had astounded Europe with his illusions and influenced the decisions of diplomats and princes. Some of his things were real, however—he invented a magic robot that added figures, and was the first man to dream of our modern adding machine."

"Much of his work was pure fakery—such as his promise to make men live for 5000 years if they followed his instructions, which were related to special diets and strict moral living. Since neither of these requirements was popular with the nobility, he always had an excuse when his clients died."

"But what he did has been surpassed by Harry Houdini, who caused a live elephant to vanish from a lighted cage—and by Thurston, who shot a woman from a cannon into a box suspended from the ceiling of the theater. The magician Blackstone has floated a glass of milk over the heads of his audience. Duval, the silk wizard, has produced hundreds of yards of silk from one small tube. One of the greatest so-called mind reading acts is The Ushers, who can tell you the serial numbers on every dollar bill in your pocket."

"Everything in magic can be easily explained in one way or the other. Our attitude is frankly, 'It's all a trick—catch us if you can!'"

"Even the weird Zombies in Haiti can be explained by powerful hypnotism. This is, of course, 'black magic' or voodooism. The actual existence of these Zombies is confirmed by many authorities, including the author and explorer William Seabrook, who described them in his book, 'Magic Island.' They are known as the living dead. A native dies and is pronounced dead by the native doctors. He is buried. Weeks later the relatives of the deceased may meet this native being herded down the street by a keeper of a group of Zombie workers, who are helpless slaves. These Zombies appear like men in a trance; their faces are gray, expressionless and rigid. They apparently see nothing, and are deaf to all but the commands of their master."

"The scientific explanation for this gruesome state of living death is based on the claim that this victim of 'black magic' is not dead when lowered into the grave, but has been placed in a hypnotic state from which he is absolutely powerless to recover. After burial he is secretly exhumed and made to work in this hypnotic state for the witch doctor has cast the spell upon him. In these days Haitian natives try to bury their loved ones in public places, and to stand watch over the grave for days after the burial."

Wizardo likes to discuss the strange things which go on in other parts of the world, because he has exposed many of them as merely the work of skilled magicians who pretend to supernatural powers.

ONE phase of "black magic," however, he has never explained, and is mystified by it himself.

African adventurers and explorers return from their trips again and again with the same story: they have come upon isolated native villages in which the natives have no way of knowing in advance of the arrival of strangers. Yet these natives have made preparations to receive the travelers, and have known the hour of their coming.

The distance from the last village may have been 50 miles and the white men may travel by river boat at a speed too great for a native runner to pass them and give warning, but in some fashion the next village knows who is coming and how many will be in the party.

The Famous Hindu Rope Trick of Which Nearly Every Person Has Heard, But Which Few White Men Have Ever Seen.

"The answer," said Wizardo, "is either mental telepathy, or the work of African drummers who send messages through the jungles in a code that no white man has learned. In any case, it is astonishing—and one of the few things the modern magician cannot explain."

Wizardo's career began as a hobby and became a profession when he gained remarkable skill in the world's oldest art.

It all started when Wizardo Sr. presented him with a toy magic set 15 years ago. At that time, Wizardo, whose real name is Fay Fuller, was eight years of age and an ardent stamp collector. But two weeks after receiving his "black magic kit" the stamp collection had changed hands and Wizardo's career as a professor of legerdemain was launched.

AFTER eight years of "magicing" Wizardo left the footlights and began to learn the newspaper business from the ground up. But not for long. During his apprenticeship on a western newspaper, Wizardo formulated an idea by which he could teach magic as a hobby to children. There was only one drawback to his plan. How could he offer the mysteries of his profession to the world without destroying its appeal? Magic without mystery is like a duck out of water, and the minute the public "catches on," the interest in any trick is gone. From the thousands of letters Wizardo had received he was certain that newspaper readers throughout the country would like to adopt magic as a hobby and pastime. How to teach them the treasured secrets of magic without exposing these secrets to the world is a difficulty. After turning the problem over, the solution presented itself and the Wizardo Magic Club came into being. Each week his readers were instructed in the age-old mysteries of magic, and only those joining Wizardo's club "found out how it's done," for each lesson in magic was printed in code!

Applications poured in and soon the membership of the W.M.C. was into the thousands. Children spent their playtimes making magic boxes and tables; from women's clubs Wizardo received dozens of letters requesting card tricks and novelties for entertainment at bridge parties; and to those confined in hospitals or sick beds, Wizardo's Magic Club helped to pass the dreary hours of convalescing.

As Wizardo says, "Magic is easy to do. Anyone can learn magic tricks with a few minutes practice. It's all in knowing how."

As you sit in a theater and marvel at the wonders of the modern magician it is hard to believe that "magic is easy to do," but, strange as it may seem, it is the simplicity of many tricks that puzzles the eye. Have you ever tried to find your pipe or a pair of glasses, looked high and low for them, only to discover that they were laying on a table or mantle right in front of your eyes all the while? That's the secret of many a magic trick. The deception is so obvious and out in the open that spectators entirely overlook it!

The motto of all good magicians is, "A Magician Never Tells," and each member of Wizardo's Club is pledged to uphold this slogan before receiving his secret code card which enables him to read his weekly lessons.

FOR countless centuries the secrets of magic have been handed down by word of mouth and many of the most famous tricks of modern times were performed thousands of years ago in oriental countries. It is only through the strict bonds of secrecy that these secrets have been preserved, and hence the universal appeal of magic. If at the end of each performance a magician were to expose the method through which each trick was accomplished, the public would soon tire of magic. Magicians are well aware of this fact, and for this reason Wizardo requires his pledge to secrecy from each club member before divulging the key to his code.

"My own mother and father are still trying to figure out the first trick I ever performed," is Wizardo's boast, "and because of this they have always been interested in my work."

Among a few of the mysteries that Wizardo teaches his "magical students" are the famous "Rising Card," "Rabbit from the Hat," "Hindu Bands," and tricks in mental telepathy and mind reading. Each trick is selected for its simplicity in performance and for the fact that none requires expensive apparatus or preparation. A few minutes at home on a rainy afternoon with a jar of paste or a piece of paper or deck of cards, and Wizardo says that everyone can win a reputation as a modern master of magic.

Beginning in next week's Five Star Weekly Wizardo's series of "Lessons in Magic" will appear. It is said that once you have been bitten by the "magic bug" you will be an ardent amateur magician for the rest of your life!

Complete information on Wizardo's Magic Club, and how young readers may become members, will be found on Page 7.

Sleep, Exercise Essential to Beauty and Charm

Girls In Quest Of Beauty Warned By June Lang Against Self-Indulgence

To Enhance Her Beauty and Slender Grace, June Lang Selects This Cream Colored Faille Taffeta Frock for Summer Dining and Dancing.

By Linda Lane

KEEPING or achieving beauty seems to be a matter of individual requirements to a great extent, although there are, of course, a number of fundamental rules that always bring results and June Lang, 20th Century-Fox actress, has found the fountain of youth in daily exercise and out-door living. Her vital loveliness has recently won her the only feminine lead in "Road to Glory" following three consecutive featured parts in other pictures.

The best way to understand the "individual requirements" problem is to go into conference with your best friend—and that doesn't mean a person of whom you are fond, and who will most likely flatter you anyway. It means the "truth-teller" in this case—your mirror.

It is more satisfactory to take stock in this fashion than to race for the latest beauty product or exercise which someone may have enthusiastically reported to you.

After you have checked up in this manner, it is then up to you to decide whether the requirement is more rest and relaxation, more exercise, and what kind, or possibly some definite treatment of the skin. Or, if you are fortunate, the mirror may tell you "all's well" and you can go right ahead on the present regime.

A look at June convinces that if anyone is qualified to give beauty advice, she is. Her skin glows with vitality and unblemished beauty. She needs no makeup, though occasionally she uses a little lipstick and powder, which are carefully blended to harmonize with her coloring.

Her eyes are clear blue, sparkling with the joy of living, and her hair a golden brown, a shade called "brownette" by makeup experts which is its own natural color.

SHE is beautifully slender, and by normal methods of diet, plenty of green vegetables and fruits balancing the heavier foods, and out-door exercise, she has no difficulty in keeping her weight at 100 pounds. She is 5 feet 4 inches tall.

"My belief is that the vital spark of beauty is really kept glowing by the natural methods of proper rest and exercise. These two requirements are what I try to keep properly balanced first of all.

"In motion picture work, or for that matter in almost any phase of hurried modern life, there often occurs the tendency to drive oneself to a point of fatigue that is often disastrous to good looks and well-being.

"In spite of outside pleasures and interests that are often so attractive, I make a point of getting at least eight hours sleep when I am working, and sometimes more.

"In this connection, I try to rest my mind for brief intervals during the day, even if it is only for ten minutes. From experience and observation, I think that tension leaves more ill effects on the face than almost anything aside from ill health.

"For complexion routine, I believe thorough cleanliness is the first necessity. My favorite system is to remove powder or makeup of any kind with a light cream and then wash my face with a mild soap and coarse wash cloth, or a good complexion brush. Ice water is good to finish off with. In very hot, dry weather I pat in a small quantity of oil or nourishing cream, after finishing the nightly scrubbing.

"The word 'exercise' is anathema to a great many people, because they think of exercise as meaning a series of positions in some gymnasium, or before an 'open window' as the instructions always say.

"If one has some actual defect to overcome, this is all right, but otherwise there are too many outdoor activities that accomplish the same results and are really fun. My theory is that having enthusiasm for what you are doing does you double good.

"ONE of the simplest forms of exercise, and one that is available to almost everyone, is walking. By that I mean good brisk striding, preferably along a dirt path if there is one to be had, but pavement will do. Walking is fun, and it is easy to put rhythm and zest into this exercise. And it is a sure way to keep trim, slender hips.

"Golfing includes more leisurely walking, but as an exercise is marvelous for the waistline. It will accomplish just as much for you as any number of 'bending' exercises, and all reports to the contrary, is good for the disposition.

"In other words, there is always some sport that will fit the individual's taste and physique. In order to keep alert, which is surely one phase of beauty, all of us should select at least one.

"Tennis, I think, is my first choice, and after that comes dancing, which though classed as a diversion is really not only exercise but one of the most natural ways of self expression. It adds to liveness, grace, and poise.

"So, if you are blessed with natural beauty, insure it by keeping both mind and body fit, if you are not, look to these sources first and employ your favorite beauty aids only for extra enhancement."

The stars have a way with them! But you can have it, too! There are certain fundamentals that every star and every famous man or woman has learned. These fundamentals Adrian Shawn has discovered by watching famous ones many years, and will tell in his booklet, "Secrets of Charm."

'Growing Up With Hollywood'

By Robert Z. Leonard

Noted Director of "The Great Ziegfeld" and Other Famous Film Productions

Chapter 5

BUT it wasn't always so easy. Even two years later it was exceedingly difficult to persuade a certain fair star to go to the Coast. She preferred to live in New York. In fact, she put down her dainty foot. But, as someone has shrewdly observed, there are tricks in all trades. Desperate, the film company negotiating with her tried one. Apparently acquiescent to her declaration that she would make pictures in the East or nowhere, it proposed a visit to its outlying studio. Charmed with the idea, the Manhattan star agreed. Knowing her to be highly sensitive, the resourceful diplomats acted accordingly. Once through the studio door, the unsuspecting guest was afflicted by a maddening din. Noise, deafening and distracting, made the place sound like a boiler shop. Carpenters hammered and sawed, prop men dragged clanking armor across the stage, electricians dropped huge metal reflectors from dizzy heights, mechanics banged away at loosened plates of a one-sided battleship, a wrecker swung his ringing sledge against an iron pipe. When one of the visitor's escorts, who wasn't in on the racket, made hushed remonstrance, he was given the wink. For her part, the wracked actress was almost given nervous prostration.

Clapping hands to her ears, she wildly cried she "never would be able to act" in the midst of such pandemonium. It was feelingly explained to her that this sort of thing couldn't possibly be helped there, as everything was still in a more or less experimental stage. It was different, of course, in Hollywood, where there were no disturbances and everything ran smoothly and noiselessly. Then and there the willing star decided to go to Hollywood. She liked it, and made good pictures.

Before her time there, indeed from the beginning of the stage migration, more men than women came from Broadway. Hollywood wasn't so particular about actors, but it wanted its actresses young.

Nor were actors particular about their looks. As most of them, like Clark Gable and Lionel Barrymore, were character men, they would often go downtown to a smart restaurant at night wearing a five-days' growth of beard.

ON ONE occasion that was the case with William Powell, now starring in "The Great Ziegfeld." From a table behind him came the outraged voice of a woman exclaiming: "Imagine letting tramps in here!"

"Pardon me, madam," begged Mr. Powell, rising and bowing to the shocked aristocrat from out of town, "but the management has a kind heart and every night gives me a crust of bread and glass of champagne."

Los Angeles and Hollywood residents are used to seeing actors who need a shave, and merely remark of one, "Oh, he's in the middle of a picture!" Street car passengers nowadays scarcely glance at movie Indians and cowboys sitting next to them. But once in my Selig days when I was made up as Sitting Bull I got on a car only to have a terrified mother snatch up her child and jump off.

When Broadway actors first came out it embarrassed them to walk along Hollywood Boulevard on their way to lunch with their faces covered with grease paint. Now nobody notices it.

During vacation periods I used to go back to the stage. With me in a company touring the Coast and giving the musical comedy "The Gingerbread Man" was Lon Chaney. In one scene, as the gingerbread character, he had to stand absolutely motionless in a shop window for ten minutes. One night some of the other actors played what they thought was a joke on him by sprinkling itching powder inside his costume, worn next to the skin. Chaney betrayed not the slightest sign of the agony he was enduring, but when he came off he was almost a nervous wreck. In those dreadful ten minutes, he had proved that same marvelous control of muscles which one day was to make him the greatest character actor in screen history. Already, too, he was displaying his uncanny genius for make-up. Again and again I urged him to go to Hollywood, but although he was interested in pictures he thought there was no place for him in them.

In that company also was "Fatty" Arbuckle, and he, too, felt there wasn't a chance for him in pictures.

New York actors, in their first invasion, might well have felt even less confidence. But they were steadily gaining it.

And now there was word, no less than sensational, that the most famous of them all, John Barrymore, was to become a Hollywood star.

Broadway, en masse, was going West.

LIKE some men, Hollywood couldn't make up its mind and, like all women, now changes it. Two years after stage actors began moving from New York, Hollywood started moving to New York. Not that the first shift caused the second. In the light of later events, no clear reason for the reversal could be seen. It all seemed an inexplicable reflex action, a sort of see-saw.

That was the way things were going in 1918 without getting anywhere. There had been no real strides since David Wark Griffith's memorable production of "The Birth of a Nation," two or more years before. Hollywood, like an awkward squad, had been marking time.

Naturally, this waste motion was accompanied by a growing restlessness. Standing first on one foot, then the other, the industry which was to become the fifth greatest in the world felt an aching desire to settle down. It may have fixed upon New York because its young feet turned intuitively to Wall Street.

To be sure, other reasons were offered, chiefly that selling, administration, and production activities should be centered in one place.

How gravely this abortive plan threatened Hollywood's future, indeed its very life, was scarcely realized at the time. Palms nodded, pepper trees rustled in the breeze, and the good burghers plodded homeward with their cash-carrying bags of provender from the open markets.

Yet unmistakably the hiatus was on. Paramount moved practically bag and baggage, while other studios established units in New York, on Long Island, and over in New Jersey.

That uncertain state of affairs went on perplexingly. Then, after two hard winters in Darkest Manhattan, the industry, like Oswald in Ibsen's "Ghosts," began crying for the sup.

SO back it went to the Land of Sol. Sitting pretty comfortably there, it looked about for something new under that sun. What it wanted might be right at its elbow. You never can tell.

Diver Dares Death To Plumb Depth Of S. F. Bay

He Scoffs At Danger
Far Below Surface—Hazards Fewer Than
At Street Crossing

This is the fourth of a series of stories about William Reed, world-famed deep-sea diver, whose tales of men and ships are proving fascinating. The author says that his tales "read like O. Henry's 'Roads of Destiny' where the mumbly and occasionally kind fates weave together threads of different lives and bring them neatly in a knot, satisfying all—even the dead—and muttering with a gesture of finality, 'Here—it is finished!'" —The Editor.

By Doris Lockett

"WHAT do I think about when I'm being lowered into the depths of the water? Of course, the only thing I think about is the job I'm going to do when I get to the bottom. No, the thought of danger never enters my mind. I'm as apt to get hurt crossing a street—and probably more, too—than I am walking along the floor of the bay," said Bill Reed, as he talked of his deep-sea jobs.

Reed, who has had a spectacular career since he entered the game, is modest about his job. It's just a job to him—no thrills, no glamour, and he scoffs at danger.

"Take this bridge job, now," he said. "If people want to know about the thrills in a deep-sea diver's life, tell them it's quite a thrill to work on a thing like this, to know you've had a part in building the biggest thing of its kind in the world."

"When you've crawled around on your hands and knees under every square foot of those piers, feeling the solid rock beneath them, while there is 246 feet of water over your head, you know how big and strong they are."

"I expect that bridge will be there a thousand years from now."

But Bill Reed thinks of a lot of things! It takes diplomatic conversation to get him talking. Once he sat relaxing on the barge just at sunset, looking out over the water at the San Francisco Bay Bridge, and said:

"Beautiful sight isn't it? Makes you wonder about lots of things. Did you ever hear of Emperor Norton? The man who had delusions of grandeur, and thought he was ruler of the United States and protector of Mexico? They called him crazy, but I don't know. Maybe he was a picturesque San Franciscan who did have strange delusions of being an emperor. It seems that everybody humored him. Thus it is today that the world realizes the consummation of the plans of a madman.

PROCLAMATION FROM HIS HIGHNESS, Norton I. Whereas, reliable information has reached us to the effect that our neighboring sovereign, the reigning Queen of the Friendly Islands, is desirous of annexing her dominions to the United States, and herself to our royal person, and whereas, it is our pleasure to acquiesce in all means of civilization and population, now therefore, we, Norton I. Dei Gratia, Emperor of the United States and Protector of Mexico, do order and direct, first, that Oakland shall be the coast termination of the Central Pacific Railroad; secondly, that a suspension bridge be constructed from the improvements lately ordered by our royal decree at Oakland Point, to Yerba Buena, from thence to the mountain range of Sausalito and from thence to the Farallones, to be of sufficient strength and size for a railroad; and thirdly, the Central Pacific Railroad Company are charged with the carrying out of this work, for purposes that will hereafter appear. Whereof fail not under pain of death.

Given under our hand this 18th day of August, A. D. 1869, and in the 17th year of our reign, in our present Capitol, the City of Oakland. Norton I.

Of course, everybody laughed—for that matter there were people in 1933 who laughed. Building a bridge like this was impossible, they said. How could men sink the foundations to solid rock more than 200 feet below the surface of the bay, they asked. Not even the engineers knew exactly how it could be done. That is why Chief Engineer Purcell went to New York to ask a 70-year-old man to figure on the problem.

That man was Daniel E. Moran, internationally known engineer, who conceived the possibility of sinking concrete and steel piers deeper than ever before, to hold bridges such as the world had never seen.

Known to all the world as the father of bridge foundation engineering, as an innovator of genius, Moran is a man who has a passion for tackling impossible jobs and making them practical and easy. His specialty has been obstacles—foundation obstacles—sinking mighty bridge piers into deep, swift rivers and tidal currents. Moran's long held belief took form in plans, which made possible San Francisco's Bay Bridge piers, resting on solid rock at a depth greater than other engineers had attempted.

The father of Bill Reed planned a deep sea diving career for his son, dreaming that one day he would work successfully beneath the sea at greater depth than had been attempted.

Three months ago a huge four-ton nickel steel pin, worth $5000, was dropped from the bridge by workmen. Engineers and executives were sweating blood—construction would be tied up for three months until another could be shipped from the East. But the daring Bill was brought into play. Donning his diving dress, he searched the bottom of the bay, and the pin was brought to the surface in fourteen hours.

But four-ton pins are comparatively simple for him to find. He also locates diamonds that have been dropped overboard and buried in the mud of the bottom. It would be interesting to know how he does it—but Bill says it's a secret!

Milady's Simplest Frocks Are Transformed By Soft Necklines

No. 1870-B

SOFT necklines transform the simplest frocks into garments women like to own. A noteworthy example of a new design is seen in this illustration. Women who face difficult fitting problems with each new dress will find a solution to their troubles in this well-designed dress. Every seam line has been the subject of careful study, and each is placed at a point where it will be an advantage to the figure. The original model is made of the new cabbage red with white print and a contrasting scalloped collar and jabot, so flattering to the face. A row of wee buttons trim the jabot at the front and render a daintiness much desired. Purchased in one of the smart shops, this frock would bear heavily on almost any budget. Make it yourself, and you'll be amazed at the saving.

Five Star Pattern No. 1870-B is available in sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 36 requires 6 1/4 yards of 39-inch material plus 3/4 yard for the contrast and 2 1/2 yards for the jacket.

No. 1847-B

If you are on a hunt for a dress that will make you feel gay and debonair, and respond to your love of "chic," this model is your answer. The slenderizing model pictured is an excellent choice for those who want to appear tall. Down the front a graduated panel does some interesting space breaking, and when the hem line is reached, spreads itself in a graceful flare, arranged so that the skirt appears slender, even though it's comfortably full. Absence of contrast is a noticeable feature. A feminine silhouette is achieved through a soft bow, while the collar has a capelet shape which does nobly by the matron. One can scarcely imagine a style more becoming to larger women with figure problems to manage.

Five Star Pattern No. 1847-B is available in sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50 and 52. Size 38 requires 4 3/4 yards of 39-inch fabric.

No. 1820-B

Printed silk jackets with plain frocks are the vogue for town ensembles. Here is a darling combination that spells "chic" in every detail. The dress is classically cut with full raglan sleeves graced by small turn-back lapels of a square neckline, and a center seam from the neck tapers to a kick pleat in the front skirt.

Note how cunningly the slanted lines of the waist are repeated in the skirt, and the alluring, printed hip-length jacket. Just glance at the two-pointed back yoke with its lovely godets, and the three-quarter bell sleeves. You'll be seeing a lot of brown and banana beige combinations this season, so why not employ this color scheme for your frock. Tuck a boutonniere of the same colors at the neckline and watch the effect.

Five Star Pattern No. 1820-B is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Size 14 requires 5 3/4 yards of 39-inch material.

No. 1872-B

Youthful party-goers and tiny tots casting a longing eye toward summer, and the clothes thereof, will adore the youthful charm of this lovely frock. This little capelet-sleeved frock is equally becoming for two- or six-year-old daughter. It's such a simple design, as you see, for the small capelets are cut in one with the scalloped yoke and trimmed with bright buttons in front and back. Or, if you prefer, tack on perky little bows of a bright contrast in place of the buttons. Every little detail conspires to mothers' sewing and the result is an adorable little dress for playtime or party. Fashioned of washable cotton, silk, dotted swiss or batiste, Gingham will make a sweet frock, too.

No. 1796-B

Here's a creation—ideal summer frock for average women. This frock that embodies all the new rules of fashion, will cultivate a new want to your personality and make you the envy of all persons feminine. This stunning frock can be made by the most inexperienced seamstress. The skirt is straight in back and four-gored in front. Notice how unusual the lines of the waist and skirt are styled. The sleeves are gathered at the shoulder yoke and fall loosely into wide monk-like effect. You can do all sorts of things with this neckline—wear a scarf, a clip or two, flowers, or just as it is sketched with a plain turnover collar—and each time the dress takes on a different air.

You might also make several belts with various buckles or ties. Silk crepe, sheer crepe, thin wools, satin, cotton or print are suggested for this lovely smooth frock.

Five Star Pattern No. 1796-B is available for sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 40 and 42. Corresponding bust measurements: 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 (34) requires 4 1/2 yards of 39-inch material.

"Young Salt"

A Serial for Young Folks
Depicting the Adventures of Sea Scouts

By Paula Norton

It was a cold gray day when Frank and Craig, high school boys, hired a rowboat and went adventuring on the San Francisco Bay. They were persuaded to take along a youngster whom they called "The Sprout." When the rowboat was tossing on the choppy waters the "Sprout" managed to lose one of the oars overboard. In trying to retrieve the lost paddle he upset the boat. The boys clung to the overturned craft for an hour and then the "Sprout," cold and terror-stricken, slipped into the sea, and out of sight. Fortunately, at this moment, a Sea-Scout schooner came to the rescue. One of the crew dove overboard and brought the unconscious "Sprout" aboard the schooner, more dead than alive. After the sea scouts had administered first aid, the three shipwrecked mariners were shivering under blankets and enjoying the thrill of seeing sea scouts at close range. A chat with the mate of the schooner revealed that they wanted nothing in the world more than to be members of a sea scout ship. (The "Sprout" was too young to join, so he was encouraged to join a Boy Scout troop. He went away nearly satisfied.)

Chapter 9

WEDNESDAY night Frank and Craig were in plenty of time to see the white uniforms of scouts filing into the "Ship" at Farlin Hall.

"Boy, is this going to be keen?" whispered Frank while he and Craig waited in the shadows by the steps. One scout after another hurried into the hall. They were all spic and span in white duck middie, neat black sailor ties and perky white "gob" hats worn "down by the bow with a list to starboard."

"Snappy layout they wear, huh?" asked Craig. Frank was already visualizing himself so garbed.

Suddenly, a man in blue uniform with a wide and a narrow gold stripe on his sleeve hurried up the steps.

"This looks like the guy we wanna see," whispered Craig. "Pardon me, sir," he said, cap in hand. "We want to join the sea scouts. We've been land scouts and we're fifteen . . . how do we do it?"

"Have you had an application blank? Better come in now." Both boys hurried into the hall after the officer. As soon as they had the important documents folded carefully in their pockets, they were anxious to see what was going on in that big room beyond. The door was not entirely closed behind the officer. A shrill whistle piped and a voice called, "Crew leaders, muster your crews."

"Let's take a look, Frank," whispered Craig. "After all, he didn't tell us to leave."

Both boys peered cautiously through the aperture into the lighted room. They were fascinated.

The room, or as much of it as they could see, was equipped very like a real ship. Stanchions were set around connecting with ropes and formed the rail of the ship. There was a staff at the stern and at the bow. Two masts rose between the Jack Staff and the Flag Staff. There was a shiny bell on the mainmast. The boys could see a large wheel, just like the ones on real ships, on the quarterdeck. There was an opening in the rail so the crew and the officers could board the ship.

"Boy, some layout, huh?" whispered Craig.

"Pipe down," and Frank nudged him in the ribs.

The crews were standing at attention now on port and starboard sides of the ship. The Crew leader walked solemnly past them, carefully inspecting each uniform. He saw that their badges were properly placed, their hats correctly worn, their uniforms pressed and clean. Apparently the officer was satisfied with his inspection.

"At ease!" he said.

Frank and Craig nearly fell into the room, they were so intent on the ceremonies of a Ship meeting.

"Crew leaders, lay aft!"

The crew leaders marched aft and saluted the mate.

"Crew leaders, report!"

A leader saluted and said, "Crew No. 1, all present and accounted for, sir!"

The mate returned the salute, "Very well." The yeoman made a note of the report. The second crew leader spoke.

"All present, one absent, sir!"

Again the mate returned the salute. "Very well."

Then orders for the rest of the evening were given by the mate.

He informed Crew No. 1 that they would furnish the color guard for the ceremony. Crew No. 2 was to supply side boys for the visiting Skipper, etc.

"Crew leaders, post!"

"About face!"

The crew leader selected the scouts for the various positions assigned to his crew. Then the mate's next order was awaited.

"Attention!"

"Stand by for Colors!"

Immediately the boys who had been selected for the color guard proceeded "on the double" to their stations, one to the staff at the bow, two to the flag staff at the stern.

"All hands . . . to the Colors!"

"Right hand . . . Salute!"

The Colors rose. A boy placed a shining bugle to his lips and sounded "Colors."

Someone entered the hall behind Frank and Craig. They stepped back and looked up at the blue uniformed man. From inside the hall they heard someone say, "Stand by to pipe the Skipper over side." "Side boys, Attention!" As the man entered the room a high shrill whistle piped and the Skipper walked through the opening in the Ship's rail that represented the gang plank. An officer stood at the rail to receive him. They exchanged salutes.

Craig closed the door softly and he and Frank hurried out to study the application blanks that were the first step in their new venture.

"Boy, this is going to be swell."

"You said it. No sissy stuff about this, is there?"

"Gosh no! and say, guy, I know now 'what that mate on the schooner meant when he said it was fun—but it was work, too. Think we can learn it all? He looked worried."

Craig was optimistic. "I know some of those guys in there, and if they can 'cut the buck' so can we."

Attractive Table Essential

Well-Cooked Food and Correct Table Service Go Hand in Hand for a Formal Dinner. A Few Definite Rules, if Followed, Will Add to the Success of a Party.

Trained Servants Are Unnecessary For The Success Of A Planned Party

HAPPY indeed is the hostess who can say to herself at the conclusion of a company meal that everything was as it should be. Well-cooked food is important to the success of any meal, be it formal dinner or simple family fare; but an attractive table and correct service are no less important. Nor are trained servants necessary to make it possible to extend one's hospitality to one's friends. The simplest meal, perfectly prepared and served by a poised, unruffled hostess is quite as enjoyable as the most elaborate formal dinner.

First, let us consider laying the table. In planning a table, whether for company or just for everyday needs, we should try to give it the stamp of our own personality. We may do this by the china and the linen we use, by the way we arrange the flowers—nor does a beautifully appointed table need to mean a table upon which a great deal of money has been expended. Indeed it is a real test of taste and artistry to be able to achieve beauty with little outlay.

Setting the table is governed by a few very definite rules. At the right of each plate is placed the knife with the sharp edge toward the plate. All spoons are placed beside the knife with the bowls up. The water glass is placed at the tip of the knife. At the left of the plate are laid the forks with the tines upward, a folded napkin is placed at the left. The silver, if it is properly laid, is in the order in which it is to be used, beginning at the outside and using toward the plate. If this very simple rule is kept in mind, the most absent-minded has only to take the outside fork or spoon, and all will be well. Silver for the dessert course is not placed in position until this course is reached. On this point, however, I feel that when the hostess serves the dinner herself, it takes one thing off her mind to put the fork or spoon for dessert on the table when it is set.

Menu Of The Week

By Joan Andrews

THIS is the time of year when full-meal salads are very much in order. They may be prepared early in the morning—or the night before—placed in the refrigerator and then brought forth in all their glory at meal time. This leaves the lady of the house free of cooking worries for the day. Here is an extra-good, wholesome and nutritious salad which may be used for cold suppers, luncheons or for party refreshment. It's called a cheese fruit ring salad, and here's the menu to go with it:

Cheese Fruit Ring Salad
Tasty Toasted Rolls
Olives
Walnut Cookies
Currant Jelly
Celery

Start the salad by soaking 2 tablespoons gelatin in 1 cup cold water for 5 minutes. Dissolve in 1 cup boiling water. Add 1 cup pineapple juice, ½ cup lemon juice, ¼ to ½ cup of sugar, ¼ teaspoon salt, and let mixture cool. When thick, pour a little gelatin mixture into the bottom of a large ring mold. Arrange alternating halves of pineapple slices and maraschino cherries or strawberries in mold. Fill mold with layers of fruit and remaining gelatin. About six slices of pineapple, cut in half, and about 2 dozen cherries or berries will be required. Let salad stand in refrigerator until set. Then turn out and fill center of ring with this mixture: 1 lb. cottage cheese, ½ cup pastry cream, whipped; ¼ cup mayonnaise, ½ cup chopped nuts, salt and paprika.

To make the tasty toasted rolls, cut thin slices of white and graham sandwich bread, large size. Remove the crust, and spread a third of the slices with chopped, stuffed olives mixed with butter; another third with ground ham moistened with mayonnaise, and the remaining third with butter combined with anchovy paste. Roll each piece of bread and hold in place with toothpicks. Place on a baking sheet and toast in a hot oven or under the broiler. Then remove toothpicks and serve piping hot with the salad.

the table the carving knife, well sharpened, the carving fork, tablespoon and gravy ladle should be placed at the place of the carver. In the usual service, the meat course is carved at the table by the host and a gracious custom it is to thus dispense hospitality. In the more formal Russian service, everything is passed to the guests by the servant, who must be well trained to do it expertly. In the home with one maid, the so-called combination service is quite generally used. The hostess frequently serves the soup from a tureen, and hands it to the maid, who in turn passes it to those at the table. The host serves the meat and vegetables and the hostess serves the salad and dessert.

Dishes are first passed to the hostess and then to the right around the table. It is no longer the custom to serve ladies first.

The formal home dinner is perhaps the pleasantest of all social gatherings and the housewife with no maid should not hesitate to bring her friends together in this way. With careful planning, she may serve unaided a simple, delicious meal, without haste or awkward pauses.

A tea cart is most useful for the woman who is her own maid. It stands at the right of the hostess and may be wheeled in and out as she finds it necessary, though for the informal dinner, it probably will not have to be moved, once it is well arranged with extra silver, dishes for different courses and the coffee service on top of the table.

NEW COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF

THE selection of George Washington as commander-in-chief of the small but valiant army of colonists, recruited to face England's resplendent, well-drilled and well-equipped Redcoats, was one of the points of high drama in American history.

The die was cast, and the great fight for freedom was begun. This was a fight that involved all the colonists, be they rich or poor, merchants or farmers, money-lenders or pawnbrokers. It was a case of everyone sticking together now . . . for the one great cause.

In June, 1775, John Adams moved that Washington be made commander-in-chief of all the American forces. The motion was seconded.

The city of New York turned out to see the new official. Then Washington moved on to Cambridge with his new commission in his pocket.

Naturally, everyone was curious about the new commander of all their troops (such as they were). This is what they learned: Washington was 44 years of age, six feet three inches tall and weighed 220 pounds. Surely an impressive-looking man to hold this important position.

AT THIS time, Washington had been living at Mount Vernon, the home he inherited from his step-brother, Lawrence. Lawrence died in the West Indies, where he had gone to try and overcome consumption. It was while in the Indies with Lawrence that George contracted smallpox. The marks of this illness showed in his face the rest of his life.

Washington was no sissy, for all his gentlemanly background. He could "dish it out" to his soldiers as well as any other army officer and his word made them snap. He took care of his soldiers, too, as best he could, with what little there was with which to run the army.

Washington gave up many of his own comforts to undertake this leadership. He was a rich man in his own right, and had a comfortable home and a family.

What a situation! There were no cannon, but Lieutenant-General Gage in Boston did have cannon, and with them he intended to hold Boston.

UP IN North New York, there were two forts, Ticonderoga and Crown Point. They were used in the defense of English property against the French. But there was no need for them now, and they were used as arsenals.

Here was a break for the American Army. Ethan Allan, a Vermont, and the famous Green Mountain boys, swooped down on these two forts and took them for the colonial army.

Benedict Arnold captured Fort St. John on Lake Champlain, and all of a sudden, the American army had 40 cannon. By a clever ruse, the ammunition of the British supply ship "Nancy" was gotten ashore.

March 17, 1776, dawned bright and clear, with the colonists who wished to remain loyal to the British crown sailing away to Nova Scotia.

Now a real army was assembled, and it made an impressive sight for the eyes of the citizens who had seen the shabby fighters on the Lexington common almost a year before.

America was moving ON!

ANCIENT FISH
FISH did not always swim. A Norwegian geologist, Professor Anatol Henitz, has discovered fossils proving that the first fish looked like big tadpoles—covered with scales like plates. These fish began first to crawl along the bottom of the sea—lost their heavy scales, and fins slowly grew.

MAGNET

MAGNET which will lift 60 times its own weight!
This new metallic compound, called "Alnico," is far stronger than any magnet alloy in use.

EARLY MAN

THE fossil remains of a prehistoric man have been found near Mt. Carmel, in Palestine. Paleontologists call him the "Palestine Man"—say he represents a race midway between the modern and Weanderthal type.

NEW GLASS

RESEARCH in astronomy is responsible for the invention of glass frying pans, kettles, pots. Pyrex—the new cooking utensil glassware, owes its discovery to the new heat-resisting glass used in making the great 200-inch telescope, largest in the world.
